Cold News.
Verne Sankey Went Out.
A Foolish Babe.
600 Little Mulattoes.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

BIG NEW YORK CITY yesterday tried a new kind of cold weather, more than fourteen and a fraction below zero, a record for all time.

The humidity was low and the bracing cold very pleasant for those that had fur coats up around their ears, warm clothing all the way down and all they wanted to eat and drink in their stomachs.

It was not pleasant for many others. Some of the jobless collapsed in the streets and many older men, compelled to look for work, in any weather, will get the pneumonia that will make further looking unnecessary.

California, Florida, Texas, all the Gulf Coast and Georgia will be interested in this New York weather. Their newspapers will not conceal the facts concerning it.

VERNE SANKEY, one of several called in Chicago "Public Enemy No. 1," was a kidnaper, knew he would go to prison for life, hanged himself with two neckties and died.

He couldn't have done that in France. When this writer went to see John L. Sullivan and Charley Mitchell, locked up for prize-fighting at Senlis, both had been deprived of their neckties and silk handkerchiefs, as the jailer politely put it, pour eviter toute possibilite qu'ils ne se pendent, "to avoid all possibility of their hanging themselves." That was the rule in France then.

They lack the imagination that would make death seem better than conviction, and would have saved them from the crime of which they face the consequences.

"BABE" RUTH, who knocks the ball so far and wide, passed his fortieth birthday entertaining reporters and influenza germs.

Only forty, yet reporters write:

"Next year will probably be the Babe's last year as a regular outfielder with the Yankees."

And the Babe himself says to a reporter:

"I am getting old, kid; getting old."

Centuries ago, with every gutter an open sewer, and medicine made of superstition rather than science, men were old at forty, and nearly all of them dead at fifty.

But now there is no excuse for feeling old until you are eighty-nine or ninety, at the earliest. And seventy should find a man at his best, in execution and in ambition.

IN THE German Rhineland and Ruhr districts are six hundred children that German authorities call "negroid." We should call them mulattoes.

Herr Schroeder, protector of "German race purity," says these are the children of Negro soldiers that the French brought onto German territory, and he wants them all "sterilized," that they may never have children.

When the war was at its height the French and others were fond of saying that the Prussians were "Huns," meaning that their ancestors were Mongols, Tartars and other invaders from the East. They did not suggest sterilization.

MAYOR LAGUARDIA, of New York, whose energy and courage have transformed many that were hostile into ardent admirers, tells reporters:

"The youngest of you will not live to see another skyscraper go up in New York City."

Mayor LaGuardia underestimates the energy of the United States and its "real-estaters."

He himself will see many skyscrapers built in New York, Chicago, Boston, Seattle, San Francisco and a hundred other cities, bigger and taller than any built before.

PRODUCTION of automobiles in the United States and Canada for January increased 78 per cent, compared with last year, and the figures do not include the Ford production, which has increased rapidly, Henry Ford increasing the pay of many workers at the same time.

The automobile is the best, surest test of returning prosperity, for the intelligent American, as soon as he is able, gets a new car.

NEW YORK CITY'S streets are slippery with ice, over which thousands of automobiles roll on gripping tires in safety and comfort.

Occasionally a horse-drawn vehicle appears, one horse or two, painfully balancing themselves on the ice, struggling to keep from falling, sweating heavily in spite of the cold weather, the day's work one of agony.

You are reminded that the machine age has done wonders, freeing animals from suffering on icy streets, and under the lash, drawing heavy loads.

MACHINES HAVE also helped to eliminate brutality from men. The driver of a truck does not get out and kick his engine, or use a heavy club on the radiator. He uses his intelligence.

Machinery, producing all that men need and more, demanding only intelligent distribution, abolishes slavery and want, is earth's greatest blessing, and only the weak minded would abandon it.

MULL, WIFE CONVICTED IN SLAYING

Verdict Carries Term Of 10 to 20 Years In Prison

Roy A. Mull and his wife, Grace, were found guilty of second degree murder by a jury today in the slaying of Margaret Schwickrtah, 23, the "Morgue mystery girl."

The verdict, given before Judge George V. Moore after an all-night deliberation by the jury of three women and nine men, carries a penalty of from 10 to 20 years' imprisonment.

PAIR STOLID

Without a trace of emotion the plain, stolid wife and her small, besepectacled husband listened to the verdict which was an outcome, the prosecution contends, of a love triangle involving the Mulls and the young packing house girl employe.

Her bulet-riddled body, almost nude, was found stuffed in a storm sewer along the Allegheny River boulevard near Verona October 30.

Their son Elmer, 19, was freed by a directed verdict of the court. The Commonwealth, during the trial, had asked that he be cleared as there was no evidence to connect him with the crime.

The jury retired to deliberate the evidence at 6 o'clock last night at the conclusion of the trial, which lasted all week.

At 10:30 o'clock this morning, the jury filed into court. One hundred persons, only a handful compared with the crowd that had packed the courtroom during the trial, were present.

BARS DEMONSTRATION

Judge Moore from the bench ordered that there be no demonstration regardless of the nature of the verdict.

In response to a question by the court, Mrs. Mary A. Sontheimer, of 1033 Marena street, foreman, announced:

"We have agreed upon a verdict and find Roy A. Mull and Grace Mull guilty of murder in the second degree and Elmer not guilty."

A dazed look overspread the countenance of Mrs. Mull, who had stood up with her husband to receive the verdict. But she maintained thec omposure that had

LOSS OF AIR CONTRACTS PROTESTED

Private Lines Demand Hearings as Army Plans to Fly Mail

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Private fliers of the American air mails, stripped of their valuable contracts by one swift administration blow, cried out today for a hearing.

President Roosevelt's wholesale abrogation of existing air mail contracts, issued last night, becomes effective February 19. On that date the planes of the United States Army will begin flying the mail. Word from the War Department was:

"We'll be ready in a week, or sooner."

Operators of air lines holding air mail contracts were quick to deny any collusion. Some frankly said that loss of the contracts might force them out of business.

HEARINGS DEMANDED

Many demanded that they be given a hearing before the contracts were taken from them. There was no official comment on these demands today, but there was private talk in some administration quarters of a hearing at least for some of the contract holders.

Under the formal order cancelling the contracts, issued by Postmaster General Farley, it was indicated at the White House that none of the concerns stripped of their contracts would be able to bid on new air mail contracts for another five years.

The 5-year provision is contained in the statute under which the order was issued. It sets forth that no firm deprived of a con-

Hats Off to Senator Ashurst And Congressman Snyder

They Are Honest and Earnest in Their Proposals To Protect the Public

SENATOR ASHURST yesterday declared his intention to introduce a bill in the United States Senate to make it a crime to pay a ransom to kidnapers.

Says Senator Ashurst:

It is a basic principle of law that those who compound a felony are in the same general category with those who commit the crime.

It is an obvious fact that those who encourage kidnaping by the payment of immense amounts of money to the kidnapers are contributing to sustain and extend the business of kidnaping, and to put it on a remunerative financial basis.

Why should these encouragers of kidnaping and supporters of kidnapers be allowed to condone this most heinous and hideous of crimes, and to reward the criminals?

CONGRESSMAN SNYDER, of Pennsylvania, has introduced a bill providing that kidnapers when captured and convicted be promptly executed by a firing squad of the U. S. Army.

He should go one step forward, however, and provide that kidnapers be TRIED under martial law as public enemies.

We are engaged in a war against crime in this country—a defensive war against the organized criminals who are trying to destroy the peace and safety, the law and the order, of this republic.

That means destroying the republic, because it is to establish law and order and peace and security for citizens that governments are primarily instituted.

In this defense of the republic, in this war against public enemies, we should employ WAR MEASURES.

No others have been effective, no others will be effective.

Traitors to cause and country, spies within the lines, should be shot.

YOU CANNOT deal politely with public enemies.

You cannot deal indifferently or ineffectively or CORRUPTLY with those who are threatening the stability of government and the peace and safety of the citizenship.

Kidnapers and gang murderers should be tried by court martial and immediately executed by a military firing squad.

Their allies and accomplices, their subsidizers and supporters, should be held equally guilty.

Every dollar which is paid a kidnaper protracts his criminal career, and endangers YOUR safety, fellow citizens, and the safety and liberty of the members of your FAMILIES and of your FRIENDS and the well being of the nation.

Unless the subsidizing of crime is stopped by law, and by the fullest penalty of the law, no man, no woman, no child will be safe from what is the most wicked and the most traitorous activitiy,—and what is being made the most profitable pursuit,—in the United States today.

ZERO BLASTS SCHEDULED TO PASS

Woman and Aged Man Burn to Death In Homes

Two persons were burned to death as a record number of fires raged in sub-zero weather that slowly relinquished its grip on the Pittsburgh district today.

The official low temperature of last night and today was 1 degree below zero at 6 a. m., at the Weather Bureau here. The mercury tumbled much lower in nearby districts.

WOMAN VICTIM

Mrs. Mary Bosico, 52, was buned to death, and her daughter, Rose, 21, was injured in a futile rescue attempt, at the Bosico home, 219 Omega street, this morning.

The woman was trapped while her husband, Patsy, the daughter and a son, Nick, 21, barely escaped from the flames that turned the two-story frame dwelling into an inferno and spread to an adjoining house.

Jacob Ellgas, 84, was found with his clothing ablaze in his one-room shack in the rear of 101 Industry street last night. Mrs. Mary Streyle discovered his plight, but Ellgas died before she and her husband could beat out the flames.

The Bosico family was sleeping when the fire broke out in their home. After the husband and children had fled through smoke and flame, the daughter rushed back into the dwelling to help her mother.

GIRL DRIVEN BACK

The girl was driven back as the fire scorched her face and hands. She was taken to Pitsburgh Hospital. The mother's body was found at a rear window on the first floor. She had collapsed at the window after groping her way from her second floor bedroom.

The son, Nick, suffered burns on the hands. The adjoining house

U. S. OPENS POLL AT WEIRTON

A government checkup of union lists of employes in the Weirton Steel Company was under way today despite the flat refusal of company officials to co-operate in compliance with President Roosevelt's order to poll the workers on the issue of a Federal supervised election of employes.

James F. Dewey, special representative of the National Labor Board, was in Weirton checking a list of 4,600 names supplied by the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers.

He was making a cross-section survey of the list, checking to de-

Accused Boy Spends Birthday in Jail

FRANKLIN, Pa., Feb. 10.—Walter Witherup, Kennerdell youth in jail charged with murder of his father, Clark Witherup, 50, on December 9 last, celebrated his nineteenth birthday yesterday, receiving a letter bearing greetings from his mother and other children of the family. Witherup insists the shot which killed his father was accidental.

Beaten Man Found Dead In Street

Apparently beaten to death, Kenneth England, 30, of Buena Vista street, was found in the street at Sherman and Grant avenues, Millvale, early today, according to a Coroner's report.

Millvale police and deputy coroners began an investigation at once. They agreed the condition of the victim's clothing indicated he was not the victim of a hit-and-run motorist. Nor had he been robbed, police said.

An autopsy was being conducted at the morgue, although deputies were of the opinion that he died of a fractured skull. His nose was crushed and his eyes were blackened, they said.

He was found by James Conlon, of 519 Stanton avenue, and Edward Goetz, of 204 Maryland avenue, Millvale. They removed him to the offices of Dr. Fred C. Koenig, who pronounced him dead.

NAGLE VERDICT SET ASIDE

ERIE, Pa., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The $150,000 verdict given Miss Theodora M. Nagle against the estate of Theodore M. Nagle for alleged defamation of character was set aside by court decree today.

In refusing to allow payment of any part of the award, the court also denied a new trial. Counsel for Miss Nagle announced an appeal will be filed in Supreme Court immediately. The $150,000 award was made by a jury a few weeks ago.

Miss Nagle's case was based on a clause in the millionaire boiler manufacturer's will which stated he had but two children and other persons claiming to be his children would be perpetrating a fraud.

French Move to Balk Nazi-Austrian Union

PARIS, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The new French government today set up a four-man directorship headed by Premier Gaston Doumergue to handle foreign affairs swiftly and vigorously and strike hard against the possibility of a German union with Austria.

The directorship intends to seek an agreement with Premier Mussolini, of Italy, and the little entente — Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Bulgaria—for the strong support of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, of Austria, and for a general solution of the Central European situation.

Meanwhile, Communist bands which had created a night of terror were cleared from miles of riot-ridden streets just before dawn today.

Unconfirmed reports told of several fatalities.

Police listed 37 of their own number as wounded, some by gunfire. The estimated the number of rioters injured at 1,000. Hospitals held 140 persons hurt during the fighting.

WALL ST. LAUNCHES LOBBY AGAINST STOCK CONTROL

FLETCHER SEES CAMPAIGN TO CRIPPLE BILL

Long Battle Indicated With Final Victory For Regulation

International News Service.

The move to prevent passage of the bill commenced within less than 24 hours after its introduction in the Senate late yesterday.

Senator Fletcher (Dem.), of Florida, Banking Committee chairman, who sponsored the measure in the Senate, said he had been informed Wall street public relations men were "down here and busy" in an effort to cripple or defeat the bill.

Fletcher, however, said there was little doubt of the bill's passage by both the Senate and the House.

ROOSEVELT ATTITUDE

While President Roosevelt made it emphatic yesterday he has neither sanctioned nor disapproved all sections of the proposed law, Fletcher said the President had received a fairly comprehensive outline of its chief provisions before introduction and was pleased with them.

However, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, majority floor leader, was not so optimistic. He said he believed the measure would become a law at the present session, but added "it faces a long road."

Fletcher predicted the bill may be amended, but that it will pass through committee and floor action unaffected in its vital features.

Public hearings on the bill will begin some time next week, according to the Banking Committee chairman. They probably will last many weeks.

PECORA IN NEW YORK

Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, who was in New York today, said it would require at least two weeks for submission of evidence of stock market irregularities, ordinary statistics and a compilation of information he has gathered from 2,000 questionnaires.

Fletcher said the Senate Banking Committee probably would draft the bill to regulate commodity exchanges, of which the grain and cotton markets are affected principally.

The Banking Committee cleared the decks for the stock market hearings by ending the lengthy inquiry in to the Detroit financial debacle yesterday. The scheduled probe of the bank crashes in Cleveland, O., will be postponed until after the market hearings, according to Fletcher.

TRIAL MARCH 12 FOR DILLINGER

CROWN POINT, Ind., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The prologue of John Dillinger's fight for his life was over today, with the Indiana bench giving and asking no quarter.

His plea in abatement and his petition for a writ of habeas corpus were denied yesterday and trial was set for March 12 in face of a request by his attorneys for a continuance of 120 days.

Indicted for bank robbery and murder of a policeman so that the death penalty is mandatory upon conviction, Dillinger was reported to be crazed with fear of the electric chair.

Prosecutor Robert G. Estill said defense attorneys had offered a plea of guilty in exchange for a promise that the death penalty would not be asked. Estill said he denied this.

Dillinger, freed of his handcuffs, sat or stood mute in arraignment. At the suggestion of his attorneys, a not guilty plea was entered in his behalf.

Their counsel, Attorney Robert B. Ivory, Jr., asked for a poll of the jury. Each member of the jury stated his acquiescence in the verdict. The Mulls looked each juror in the eye as they continued standing.

The son Elmer was in the courtroom crowd. He did not greet his parents.

Prosecutor Pruger moved for sentence. Attorney Ivory asked that he be given time to consider asking for a new trial. The court allowed him the customary four days.

LED BACK TO JAIL

Prosecutor Pruger had asked the jury in his closing address to find the couple guilty of first degree without the dealth penalty. He said.

"These people would have you believe they were the girl's friends and benefactors.

"They tell you that when Margaret had an illegitimate child, they paid the expenses. But let me tell you Margaret paid for that.

He stressed the disappearance of a .38 caliber revolver belonging to Mull which, the state contended, was used in shooting the girl to death.

The Schwickrath girl lived with the Mulls at 816 East Ohio street. The commonwealth held that she was slain following a quarrel in the Mull former home, a cabin, at Haydenville, Westmoreland County and her body brought here and placed in the sewer to cover up the crime.

GUFFEY GROUP IN CONTROL OF MEETING

Democratic Machine Crushes Opposition At Harrisburg

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Feb. 10.—The Democratic state machine, engineered by Joseph F. Guffey and David L. Lawrence, of Pittsburgh, will roll roughshod over all opposition this afternoon at the meeting of the Democratic state committee, and the slated candidates for state and national offices approved by the organization will be indorsed with a minimum of opposition.

The slate will read:

For Governor, George H. Earle, III, Philadelphia; United States Senator, Joseph F. Guffey, of Pittsburgh; Lieutenant Governor, Thomas Kennedy, of Hazleton; Secretary of Internal Affairs, Thomas A. Logue, of Philadelphia; Judge of the Superior Court, Chester H. Rhodes, of Stroudsburg.

MORRIS WITHDRAWS

The only possibility of a fight on the floor of the committee meeting was dissipated last night when Edward S. Morris, of Philadelphia, announced that the name of his father, Roland S. Morris, would not come before the meeting as a candidate for the United States Senate. Morris has been linked with Judge Charles D. Copeland, of Westmoreland County, tentative candidate for Governor on an opposition slate.

Coincidental with the announcement by young Morris came the statement by John B. Kelly, Guffey leader in Philadelphia, that he would be named shortly as an assistant United States District Attorney. Democrats of both regular and rebellious persuasions commented upon the timeliness of the two announcements, but young Morris declined to amplify the statement that his father, in the West, had authorized him to say that his name should not be presented at this afternoon's meeting.

Organization followers, led by Guffey, State Chairman Warren Van Dyke and David L. Lawrence, chairman of Allegheny County, predicted that 90 of the 113 members of the state committee would vote approval of the organization slate this afternoon.

AVOID FIGHT

Rebels, who were advocating a slate composed of Morris and Copeland with Representative Norbert J. Fitzgerald, of Erie, for Lieutenant Governor; John R. Collins, Coudersport, for Secretary of Internal Affairs, and Rhodes for Superior Court, determined this morning not to fight the organization ticket.

Under the direction of Meredith Meyers, of Lewistown, they plan a session in about two weeks, at which time an opposition ticket will be placed in the field. In view of today's developments, however, there is some question as to whether the candidacy of the elder Morris will be pushed.

Sedgewick Kistler, national committeeman, was a notable absentee at today's meeting. Mr. Kistler has denied that he indorsed the organization slate, and the prominence of Collins in conferences of the rebels indicated that Kistler might be among the recalcitrants. Collins and Kistler are close friends.

PLATFORM READY

In this afternoon's meetings the regulars will present a platform which will be the principles upon which their candidates will seek nomination.

Early last night Guffey announced that City Councilman John J. Kane would make the speech nominating him as the organization candidate for the Senate. Lawrence later said that Kane would not attend the meeting and Assistant City Solicitor John J. Kennedy is scheduled to place the name of Guffey before the committee.

If Another War Comes, Let Us Be Sorry But Stay Out Of It, Declares R. W. Childs

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD,
Noted Author and Ambassador to Italy Under Presidents Harding and Coolidge.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—War talk is in Washington. There would be less of it if there were more frankness and reality about it.

For instance, it is possible to hear men in government who should know better, drivel on about one becoming "involved" in some far away war between two nations in the Far East scheduled by some prophets for this year.

How "involved?"

If ever there was a propaganda-bred folly we stepped into it when we assumed during the last war that every war must be a world war.

IT IS a curious fact that every peace fanatic is always preaching that very propaganda, i. e., that every time two nations go to war in these modern times then one after another all the others must be "involved" until there is a world-welter.

Such arrant nonsense, unless it becomes a kind of dangerous epidemic disease of our national thought, should be made to fly into splinters on the hard rock of American common sense.

The last world-welter showed no dividends for anybody.

Today we have no military alliances—and President Roosevelt, apparently, has learned the lesson we all want our leaders to learn in foreign affairs—the lesson that we should not poke OUR nose into the affairs of OTHERS.

We have had our benevolent old nose banged enough.

If there is anything in this war talk about friction between Japan and Russia, certainly it should quiet the rather silly idea that Japan would have the will or spare energy or even sensible reason to tackle us.

If there is anything in this war talk of any practical use to us it is that it gives us the occasion to think clearly in advance.

THINKING clearly, we should determine the following conclusions:

First, let us remember that most of the propaganda which would mix us into a FAR EAST quarrel comes straight from EUROPE.

Second, let us not waste time hoping for the League to DO ANYTHING.

Third, let us be certain that we are not again made the world's worst catspaw.

Fourth, if trouble comes let us be sorry AND ALOOF. The best guarantee for ability to keep aloof is a REAL NATIONAL DEFENSE.

TRADE GROUP OPTIMISTIC

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—"A feeling of cautious optimism" was noted by the United States Chamber of Commerce today as characterizing the Washing situation.

Summarizing present conditions in its "fortnightly summary," the chamber said that "administrative trends are pointing more directly to the stimulating of natural recovery; to the encouragement of private business to take over as soon as possible a larger part of the burden of employment."

Noting further efforts to stimulate public and private borrowing and to ease their refunding operations, the chamber also reported that pressure is growing for modification of the "unnecessary restrictions" of the Truth and Securities Act. The chamber maintained the law has been retarding the flow of capital.

Wedded Life Just 'Moving Day,' Wife Sues

MEDIA, Pa., Feb. 10.—(INS.)—Neighbors used to say "the Dickens don't live here anymore" but now it will be "the Dickens don't live together anymore."

It was always "moving day" for the Dickens family, according to the camplaint that won a divorce for Mrs. Doris Dickens, of Yeadon, from her husband, Norman, 28.

The complaint testified that during three years of married life she and her husband had occupied 27 homes in four states.

RYAN SCORES LEWIS, HYNES

UNIONTOWN, Feb. 10.—Openly defying the edict of President William Hynes against the calling of a convention of District No. 4, United Mine Workers, for Monday, Martin Ryan, strike leader in the H. C. Frick Company mines, termed the regime of John L. Lewis as international president of the union a "monarchy" and declared he would attend the convention and make a speech.

Ryan said he had not called the convention at Cardale, near here, but reiterated his intention of attending. He said he understood that it was called by miners who wanted to know what happened at the international convention at Indianapolis. He said:

"The entire convention was dominated by John L. Lewis for the nation and Bill Hynes for District No. 4. Lewis appoints all of the officers and they in turn elect him. The rank and file of the unions haven't a chance in the world."

He declared he did not know much about the Progressive Miners Union, which it is rumored is interested in the convention.

Lists Being Checked Without Company Co-Operation

termine whether the signers of union petitions were actually employed at Weirton plants and whether it was their wish that the government supervise an election of representatives for collective bargaining.

POLICIES OUTLINED

Milton Handler, general counsel for the board, left for Washington last night to confer with Senator Robert F. Wagner, chairman. Before leaving Pittsburgh, he released to the newspapers a statement which outlined the policies of the board and answered the Weirton company's refusal to cooperate.

Handler's statement declared that the President's order is "very explicit" and leaves the method of procedure to the board. The executive order reads:

"Whenever the National Labor Board shall determine in such manner as it sees fit that a substantial number of the employes request an election, the Board shall make arrangements and supervise the conduct of an election under exclusive control of the Board and under such rules and regulations as the Board shall prescribe."

HEED BOARD'S POWER

Handler maintains that it is entirely in the discretion of the board as to what constitutes a "substantial" number of employes.

Handler's statement also declares:

"The board has no concern with 'imposing' any form of organization, either company union or any other union. The law's intent is that no employer, Mr. Weir included, shall impose on the men any specific organization. Choosing their own organization is solely the workers' business and that the workers may transact that business without interference is what the board is endeavoring to safeguard under the President's order."

COMPANY'S STAND

In refusing to co-operate in the Federal poll, the Weirton Company accused the Labor Board with failure to perform its agreement to supervise an election of employes held the week of December 11. This was the election held by the so-called company union. The Weirton statement, prepared by Attorney Earl F. Reed, declared:

"We wrote Senator Wagner on December 11, stating in full the respects in which the National Labor Board had failed to perform its agreement with us and terminating our relationship with that board. After that the Labor Board made various threats to bring legal action or criminal action against us, and we replied that we would welcome an investigation of the matter in court.

"We feel, therefore, that it would be highly improper for the National Labor Board to be the agency to determine whether or not the election in December, 1933, was fair. It is like appointing one of the contestants to be umpire, and we could not consent to it."

BACKED BY INDUSTRY

The attitude of the Weirton company apparently represents the attitude of the entire steel industry, observers point out. Since the inception of the National Recovery Act and its collective bargaining clause, Section 7 (A), various interpretations have been advanced.

MINERS TO GO TO CAPITAL

DUBOIS, Pa., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Representatives of District No. 2, United Mine Workers of America, are to go to Washington February 21 with demands for the "closed shop," a 30-hour week and the "best possible" wage scale.

Three delegates were named yesterday and Cambria County miners appoint their representative today.

Appointment of the delegates and adoption of the wage and working conditions resolutions yesterday marked the close of a special convention called by James Marks, district president. They are to attend the capital hearing on the Appalachian coal code, which Marks predicts will be changed.

Senate Group Approves Modified Tugwell Bill

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The Copeland-Tugwell food, drugs and cosmetics bill has been approved in a modified form by the Senate commerce subcommittee which has been studying it several months.

Senator Copeland (Dem.), of New York, physician-author of the bill, said it now was satisfactory to President Roosevelt and had been approved by the Agriculture Department. He announced he would ask action by the full committee next week to get Senate approval this session. Copeland said:

"We took some of the controversial issues on which Prof. Tugwell and I did not agree to the President, and made him the referee."

Changes in the bill, Copeland said, were for the sake of clarity and precision with no material change in substance. He added:

"The bill embodies every worthy idea for consumers' protection that has been presented to the committee. It is a vast improvement over the present law and is sorely needed to conserve the welfare of our people.

"It should receive their unqualified support. No legitimate commercial interest should fear its provisions, but those who manufacture honest goods should welcome its enactment as a means of reducing unfair competition from dishonest merchandise."

One of the principal revisions, the Senator said, was to give representation to the food industries on the advisory committee which will advise the Secretary of Agriculture in establishing definitions and standards for foods.

The committee as now provided is to consist of seven members, three from the general public, two from the Food and Drug Administration, and two from the food industries.

New Envoy Fears War As Japanese 'Suicide'

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Japan does not want to commit national suicide by going to war with Russia, Hiroshi Saito, new Japanese Ambassador to Washington, said as he arrived with his wife and two daughters from the Hague, his last diplomatic post.

War with Russia would mean for Japan war with the rest of the world, including the United States, Saito continued, adding:

"That would be Japan's suicide. I am placing my cards on the table face up. We are not going to fight. Russia does not want to fight us, and we don't want to fight Russia."

The Ambassador sat in the smoking-room of the Berengaria. He observed:

"It is said we will go to war with Russia about the Chinese Eastern Railroad, but that is a matter for negotiation. We cannot go to war simply because the price of a railroad is too high."

NEW CLUES TRACED IN SEARCH FOR BREMER'S KIDNAPERS

STORIES OF FIVE GIVE HOPE TO SEARCHERS

Victim of Gang Still Suffering Effects Of Captivity

ST. PAUL, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Fresh clues—meager, but still holding possibilities—gave police and federal investigators new hope today that they can bring to justice the gang that "snatched" Edward G. Bremer for $200,000 ransom.

The names of at least five persons who are believed to have seen either the kidnapers' automobile or its occupants were in the possession of the police and Department of Justice agents.

One of them, Mrs. Cressens Dehmer, a widow, told the investigators how she had seen the scuffle in the victim's car when his abductors slugged him with pistol butts. She was regarded as the most important of the witnesses.

Another—also a woman—whose name was not divulged, reported that she had taken a note of the license number of an automobile she believed was the one the kidnapers used.

From an oil station attendant the authorities heard a story that he had seen three men in a car resembling the gang's machine the day of the abduction, January 17, and that a man in the rear seat was wearing a tan coat.

But the lead the investigators were hoping to get more than any other—the location of the gang's hideout, where Bremer languished in a darkened room for 22 days, was still a mystery.

Meanwhile the mark the kidnapers had left on the victim was one that will take many days for him to forget.

Greatly unstrung and assailed with recurring headaches after 22 days as captive of a gang, the president of the Commercial State Bank will be forced to forego business for probably a week.

FAIR PLAY PLEA MADE HERE IN AIR SHAKEUP

Firm Asks Roosevelt For Chance to Show Contract Is Legal

Pennsylvania Airlines, Inc., of Pittsburgh, joined today with the nation's air mail carriers in protesting to President Roosevelt over the cancellation of its contract, and offered to gamble 60 days' service to prove its government subsidy was legally obtained.

Over the signature of Maj. H. S. Martin, president of Pennsylvania Airlines, which operates daily passenger, mail and express service from Pittsburgh to Cleveland and Washington, the following telegram was sent to President Roosevelt:

"This action has been taken without our company having been given any hearing either by the Senatorial investigation committee or the Postoffice Department or by any other tribunal.

'FAIR PLAY' APPEAL

"Canceling our contract on the basis of irregularities alleged or inferred by a prejudicial and unfair investigation without our being heard is an act so unjust we cannot reconcile it with your previously shown sense of justice and fair play.

"We know we can answer to your complete satisfaction any charge made by the Senate committee and can prove that our contract was legally awarded. Accordingly, we request that your Postmaster give us an early opportunity to present the true facts concerning our case. Our company has lost substantial sums of money in performing service under our contract. No dividend has ever been paid to the stockholders and no bonuses have been paid officers or employes.

SERVICE OFFER

"During the period these facts are being considered by you and in order to help to avoid complete disruption of service, we hereby offer to carry the air mail over our route for a time not to exceed 60 days. We shall be glad to waive payment for such service if any irregularities are proved or if your careful judgment leads you to believe our contract was improperly obtained.

"If your judgment bears out our contention, however, we expect payment in accordance with the terms of our contract.

"In all fairness to our employes, our stockholders and to the communities we serve, we respectfully request a hearing before you at the earliest possible moment."

tract for collusion can seek another for five years.

The President, ordering the Army and Department of Commerce to co-operate with the Postoffice Department for the period of the "emergency," indicated that some time would elapse before new contracts will be let.

Since some of the firms are the largest in aviation, the private talk was that some reorganization might be suggested that would allow them to bid again within that period.

WAR DEPARTMENT BUSY

Meanwhile, the War Department gave evidence of more bustle than for months as it prepared to take over the huge air mail system. Orders were flashed to aviation squadrons in all sections of the country.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, asserted:

"We will start flying the air mail a week from today and there will be no delay, no difficulty and no interruption."

The administration was in receipt today of various suggestions for its next step in the arrangement of contracts after the Army is relieved.

Richard W. Robbins, president of Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., telegraphed President Roosevelt suggesting that the line be allowed to carry the mail according to its contract for one month, while a hearing was arranged.

OPEN BIDDING CLAIM

Thomas B. Doe, president of Eastern Air Transport, Inc., a subsidiary of North American Aviation, asserted his company received its air mail contracts under open bidding in the Coolidge administration, and that he felt he had "a right to assume that I will be given a chance to answer specific charges, if there are any, before any final cancellation takes place."

at 221 Omega street caught fire, but nine persons living there escaped unhurt. Jesse Butler, Negro, carried his sick wife to safety.

The Bosico home was destroyed and the adjoining house was badly damaged. Neighbors moved their furniture to the street as the flames threatened to spread.

This morning's official low temperature here was 10 degrees higher than the 35-year record-breaking minimum of yesterday. The cold wave was blamed for 14 deaths in the state, according to the Associated Press. One exposure death occurred here yesterday.

SNOW FORECAST

The intense cold will be followed by snow late tonight or tomorrow, according to the Weather Bureau forecast. The temperature was rising after the 6 a. m. low.

In Venango and Clarion counties official temperatures of 16 to 20 degrees below zero were reported.

Fifty-five fire alarms in the 24-hour period ending last midnight set a new record in the 28 years John Llewellyn has served as city fire alarm operator. Suburban fire departments were equally busy.

The homes of John P. Ludebuehl, 615 Rockwood avenue, Mt. Lebanon, and Dominic Mazzei, 243 The Boulevard, Carrick, were badly damaged by flames that kept firemen busy for long, cold hours. Hoseman Patrick Barrett and George Volkel were taken to Mercy Hospital suffering from cuts and smoke during the Carrick fire.

The roof of the smokehouse of the Dunlevy-Franklin packing plant, Hamilton avenue and Enterprise street, was burned; a three-story brick double dwelling at 102-104 Baldwin street, Castle Shannon, and a stable and garage at the St. Francis convent, near Castle Shannon, were destroyed, and a row of seven frame homes in Davis street, Millvale, were threatened.

PAL OF SANKEY GETS LIFE

Their leader—Verne Sankey, known as America's No. 1 public enemy—who chose to kill himself by hanging in the state penitentiary rather than submit to the law, was in a morgue, while the last of the mob, Gordon Alcorn, was under sentence to spend the remainder of his days in the government's pentitentiary at Leavenworth.

He was started to Leavenworth last night after he had pleaded guilty in federal court to his part in the $60,000 kidnaping of Charles Boettcher, II, wealthy Denver broker.

Two other members of the gang, Arthur Youngberg and C. W. Peace, were arrested some time ago and already are serving prison terms for their part in the affair.

Only one person, Mrs. Sankey, remains to be tried in the Boettcher case.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Feb. 10.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

In England, statistics show that a large percentage of criminals commit suicide before being caught, knowing what will happen to 'em when they are captured.

Will Rogers

Can you imagine ours doing that? Look at the publicity they would miss. But are our courts and judges changing, for didn't this Sankey commit suicide in jail. Maybe this is liable to start a fad.

Monday France wanted Communism, Tuesday they wanted a king, Wednesday an old man told 'em to go home and have a good drink of wine, take a nap, and forget it. Just about what will satisfy any mob. Yours,

WILL.

WILL HINT ROMANCE FOR CHAPLIN

International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 10.—The "leading lady" dressing room at the Charlie Chaplin movie studio has been completely refurnished for a new occupant.

And Hollywood, recalling that two of the heroines who played opposite the master comedian became Mrs. Charles Spencer Chaplin, today was asking if history will repeat itself.

The slender, beautiful actress for whom the dressing room has been done over in blue and gray and peach is Paulette Goddard, already designated as the heroine of Chaplin's next picture.

Rumor has it that the two have been married secretly, but this is stoutly denied. Alfred Reeves, Chaplin's business manager and friend, said:

"I'm sure Mr. Chaplin won't be married at least until his picture is finished."

Two other Chaplin leading ladies went to the altar with the famous actor after having appeared with him on the screen. They were Mildred Harris and Lita Grey. Other famous occupants of the "leading lady" dressing room include Virginia Cherrill and Georgia Hale.

Army Men Welcome Mail Flying Job

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(INS.)—Army officers stationed at Mitchell Field today were jubilant over the news that the Army was to take over the flying of the mail.

While none of the officers was willing to be quoted it was the consensus that the executive order of the President was a "break" for the Army Air Service—that it will mean more planes and equipment.

M'CRACKEN SET FOR ARREST

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The arrest of William P. MacCracken was expected momentarily today by officials, following his defiance of the Senate by refusing to appear to face contempt charges.

It was reported in authoritative quarters the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Air in the Hoover administration would surrender during the day and immediately institute court proceedings to test the right of the Senate to arrest a rivate citizen.

MacCracken was accused of allowing certain air mail papers to be removed from his office while they were under a Senate subpena.

Relates Horrors Of Battle After Forced Stopover

Hans Muller, noted German war ace now in Pittsburgh following a forced landing on an outlying farm, today voiced admiration for the Sun-Telegraph's publication of authentic World War pictures.

The flier, who for four years slashed his way through frenzied skies over the Western Front and blasted death and destruction into 31 allies planes and 7 balloons, said:

"These pictures will impress on the public the real sordidness of war never before revealed. They strip war of the silly trappings that once appealed to man's better nature. The motive in publishing them—prevention—is admirable and they should prove effective."

Glory and adventure are absent from his memories of the conflict of 1914-18, Muller revealed. He declared:

"The horrors of the last war will always remain with me. Were another to break out, nothing could drag me into it.

"My most vivid memory is the aftermath of the bloody battle of Champagne, where I saw bodies of soldiers and civilians in 15-foot piles stretching over miles of ground. Such scenes would convince anyone of the futility of war."

Muller has been an aviator for 22 years and had flown with Richtofen, Germany's famed ace, in forays over the allied lines. Lost in a heavy haze while flying from New York to Laredo, Mex., where he owns an aviation school, the flier was forced to land in a meadow two miles from Rogers Field.

Weather Conditions.

The high pressure that caused the cold weather over this section during the past few days is now centered over West Virginia and Maryland. As a result of this continued southward movement of the high cold weather spread southward over the Gulf states, while over the Ohio Valley states and the lake region and westward over the plains states temperatures are now rising. A low pressure area centered over Southern New Mexico is producing cloudiness and rain or snow over the entire Southwest and eastward over the Gulf states. Another low is centered over Manitoba, but is causing only light snowfall in scattered places. High pressure is centered over the Northern Rocky Mountain states, causing only a slight drop in temperature over that section.

River Conditions.

The rivers are falling. Stage at Franklin is 1.1 feet; Lock No. 7 (Mon.), 11.5; Pittsburgh, 11.1; Dam No. 4, 4.5; No. 8, 5.3; No. 10, 5.2, and No. 12, 6.7. The dams are down. The upper rivers are frozen over. Ice is 9 to 14 inches thick on the Allegheny pools from No. 8 up. On the Monongahela River pools the ice is from three to five inches thick. In the Pittsburgh harbor the ice is one and one-half inches thick. The ice in the Ohio River is moving below the fixed dams.

CHARLES FLINN DIES IN HOME

Confined to his home by illness for nearly six months, Charles E. Flinn, brother of the late Senator William Flinn, and a former member of the Allegheny county department of elections, died today.

Mr. Flinn had been in politics for many years. In 1929 he was named to the redistricting commission by Gov. John S. Fisher and had up to a few months ago served in the county election department. Two years ago he was struck by an automobile while crossing the street from the City County Building to the Court House and, according to members of his family, had never fully recovered from the effects of injuries.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Rebecca Browne Flinn of 447 Marshall avenue; and two sisters, Miss Katharine Flinn of Atlantic City and Mrs. George H. Albertson of the East End.

BLAME DR. DEAN FOR DIVORCE

GREENWOOD, Miss., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Smartly tailored in maroon tweed and black fur, her head held up under a trim felt hat, Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean, 33-year-old woman physician, listened unperturbed today as the state attempted to prove she not only poisoned Dr. John Preston Kennedy, Greenwood surgeon, with a whisky highball, but had also precipitated a divorce between Dr. Kennedy and his wife.

With equal serenity, she heard her own attorneys counter the state attack with cross-examination designed to show that Kennedy had been frequently gravely ill, sometimes from overdoses of drugs, prior to his strange 10-day illness last July.

This last illness, the state has charged, followed upon a midnight meeting and a "farewell drink" between Kennedy and Dr. Dean.

Some Knee Action Weather; You Can Walk or Freeze

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

It's fourteen below nothing. A gentleman tipped his hat to a lady and scalped himself.

We tried to put the cat out at midnight. After a fierce tussle it shoved us out and slammed the door.

Dillinger Gang Trio Face Murder Trial

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Feb. 10.—(INS.)—Three members of the notorious Dillinger gang, recently captured in Tucson, Ariz., today were turned over to Ohio authorities to stand trial for the slaying of Sheriff Jess Sarber, of Lima, O., October 12.

The trio who engaged in the daring break from the Indiana State Prison September 26, are Harry Pierpont, alleged trigger man in the Sarber slaying, Russell Clark and Charles Makley.

ROBBER FELLS DOCTOR'S WIFE

Investigating a noise in the office of her husband, Dr. C. LeRoi Thompson, 2329 Perrysville avenue, last night, Mrs. Laura Thompson was struck on the head with a blunt instrument by a burglar, who escaped with a medicine case of narcotics, according to police.

Her husband had left the office five minutes before the robbery occurred. She was treated for a slight laceration after calling another doctor.

Junior League Party Thrills 'First Lady'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Three Junior League girls who posed in tableaux 30 years ago—Eleanor Roosevelt, Mary Rumsey and Isabella Greenway—were being told today how lovely they looked as they watched modern Junior Leaguers strut at last night's ball.

The President's wife, wearing a rosebud wreath around her 1901 pompadour, rosebuds appliqued on the gossamer tulle over her gown of blue, liked high-kicking, castanet-clocking modern youth so well that she stayed until 10 minutes of one o'clock this morning, watching the cabaret floor show.

Mrs. Rumsey, of NRA, in her authentic debutante dress of silver, rosebuds, and pink tulle, of the days when she started the Junior League, went about to a rippling murmur of:

"Oh, isn't she just too sweet!"
"That quaint high waist!"
"Will you look at her hair in the back?"

And as for attractive Representative Isabella Greenway, of Arizona, such a time as she had had—and was having! In the first place, the authentic hourglass gown of gray silk embroidered in iris that was sent to her from Maine failed at the last moment to meet the back, and she had to concoct another costume, the color of which she described as "vermillion red."

Mrs. Roosevelt later said the color of Mrs. Greenway's gown was a "bit advanced" for girls of her day, even though Isabella did come out two years later than herself and Mary Rumsey.

Chance Visit Saves Four Overcome by Fumes

Mrs. Jennie Graham, 35, of 2452 Snyder street, was thankful today for a chance visit her neighbor, Mrs. Elvina Groetzinger, 30, of 2453 Snyder street, paid her yesterday.

On her arrival Mrs. Groetzinger found Mrs. Graham, her two sons, David, Jr., 5, and James, 3, and a roomer, James Chesney, 24, unconscious from gas fumes.

Chesney had lighted a hot water heater after thawing out pipes and apparently turned the gas too high, fumes permeating the dwelling.

Police with inhalators succeeded in resuscitating all four, but the older boy was sent to Allegheny General Hospital. The father, David Graham, Sr., is employed in the Mellon National Bank.

CHURCHES BEGIN OBSERVANCE OF LENT WEDNESDAY

MANY SPECIAL SERVICES TO BE HELD

With the beginning of Lent Wednesday opens one of the most important and significant seasons of the church year, a season which Christian churches throughout the world observe for seven weeks with a deepening of spiritual life as a means of proper approach to Easter.

Many churches throughout the district are holding special Lenten services during this time, bringing before their congregation more intensely than before, the meaning of the life of Jesus.

The Story of David -:- CHAPTER XV -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

Sorely wounded by the Philistines, Saul bade his armorbearer to slay him with a sword, but he would not; so Saul fell upon a sword and died, and his armorbearer then fell upon his own sword and died.

And a man of the Amalekites came and told David that he had slain Saul at Saul's own request. Then David and all his men mourned for Saul, and at David's command one of his men slew the Amalekite.

Then David was anointed king over the house of Judah, but Abner, captain of Saul's host, made Ishbosheth, Saul's son, king over all Israel. And when Asahel followed after Abner, Abner slew him.

And while Ishbosheth lay asleep Rechab and Baanah, sons of Rimmon, went in and slew him. And they brought Ishbosheth's head to David in Hebron, thinking to please him, but David had them put to death.

PRUDENCE AWARDS CHINESE RECIPE $5 PRIZE

Flood of Menus For Cheese Cake Submitted

Cheese cake was what Prudence Penny requested in one of her columns not so long ago, and cheese cake she got. Hundreds of recipes for it, and almost every one different. What was Prudence Penny to do? She couldn't award a prize to only one cheese cake, for all the recipes were excellent, nor could she give them all prizes for then she could print no other recipes in her column for several weeks to come.

As a solution to her problem, and it was a problem, she did what she had done once before. Picked the recipe that most nearly corresponded to the one requested and today she's printing it, not as a prize winner, but as an honorable mention.

And to all the housewives who so generously responded to her request, she wants to send her sincerest thanks for their co-operation. She asks them to keep on sending their recipes to her. (Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph) for she knows they'll, all, at some time or other, win either the first prize of $5 or one of the ten $1 prizes awarded daily. No recipes are returned.

THREE GALA PROGRAMS :-: Radio Commissioner, Ray Perkins Participate :-: IN SALUTE TO WCAE

Powerful New Transmitter Dedicated

Two important figures in the Federal Radio Commission and one of the most popular radio comedians are in Pittsburgh today to take part in broadcasts dedicating WCAE's powerful new transmitter.

Three special programs—two originating here, and one in San Francisco—pay tribute to the local station's ultra-modern installation.

Thad H. Brown, vice-chairman of the commission, and Dr. C. B. Jolliffe, head of the commission's engineering department, speak briefly on one of the programs fed to the NBC network from WCAE.

* * *

A concert orchestra under the direction of Clifford Marshall, the WCAE Troubadours, So-and-So Trio, Howard Price, Charlotte Shallenberger, Ann Page, Pittsburghers Quartet, Ruth Johnstone, Gene Llewellyn, Pierre DeBacker's string ensemble and the WCAE Players liven the hour from 9 to 10 with melody and drama.

* * *

RAY PERKINS

From 11 to 11:30 p. m., network listeners from coast to coast hear the second salute of the evening, also originating in Carnegie Hall.

Ray Perkins, NBC comedian, serves as master of ceremonies in the second program.

Compositions of world renowned Pittsburgh composers are fed to the network by a concert orchestra. Clifford Marshall, WCAE musical director, has composed two special numbers for the occasion — "Pittsburghesque" and "Radio."

* * *

At midnight, NBC returns the compliment in a broadcast from San Francisco, dedicating a full hour "Carefree Carnival" to WCAE.

WCAE is affiliated with the Sun-Telegraph.

The Globe Trotter is heard over WCAE-WJAS this afternoon at 2:15, and this evening at 6:30.

GLOBE TROTTING

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Yesterday Frank Cargo and George Cargo, their niece, Mildred Mains, of Boston, and Harry Cargo, their uncle, of Irwin, were celebrating anniversaries. Stranger still is that three generations are represented, each exactly 20 years apart.

* * *

J. A. Booze, proprietor of the general store down at Millsboro, Pa., bobs up with a letter about odd money. "Hard times" deposited on his counter a "jackass' $10 bill.

It was issued in 1880. The emblem on the back is an eagle. It is a donkey on the front. It is engraved in such a way that it is all one emblem.

A word of praise should be directed toward Recorder of Deeds Samuel D. Foster and his staff in the new County Office Building.

They have remained open each night until 10 to fill out and swear veterans claiming compensation.

Here's a Light That Never Goes Out

Politics Big Headache to Network

By AIRCASTER

Through an effort to be fair politically the major networks have a perplexing problem on their hands—a problem that has grown out of the unparalleled public adulation of the President and his new deal.

To play to an idolizing audience, famous artists, for instance, have been making friendly references to the White House, and thus have evoked the wrath of opposing political groups, who write, phone and telegraph sponsors in protesting terms.

Several large programs are discontinuing their "new deal" gestures as a result.

* * *

In no way does this relieve the network situation.

It is a rule that broadcasters must give the right of way on their facilities to any adminstration.

The Roosevelt government just happens to have become more closely associated with radio than its predecessors.

Hence, the claims of its foes that radio chieftains are in line to discourage criticism of the government

* * *

SENATOR REED

To emphasize their fairness the networks usually offer their channels to any recognized figures inclined to utter criticism.

Of these, the most recent was Senator Borah, who spoke Wednesday night to disapprove certain administration endeavors.

A week from tomorrow night Senator Reed, of Pittsburgh, will do likewise via an NBC chain.

But does this nonpartisanship of the radio webs bring favorable reaction? It does not!

The minute after the Borah speech was over, the switchboards of every station that carried it were swamped with indignant calls.

The curious phase of it all is that most of those who protest are prone to direct their ire more at the networks than at the speakers whom they resent—which makes the matter even more bewildering.

Local Highlights on WJAS Tonight

Don't forget—Paul Gannon's songs at 6:45 and Barnyard Frolics at 7:45.

'Little Guillotine' Dramatized

Pittsburgh, Wheeling and Fairmont audiences hear a thrilling, real life detective drama this evening, revealing the adventures of one of Europe's most daring and famous sleuths, when "Little Guillotine," adapted from an article in tomorrow's American Weekly, distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, is broadcast over WCAE at 7:45 p. m., WWVA at 5:45 p. m., and WMMN at 7 o'clock.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Be careful, extra careful, when it is cold weather fellows! Going from a warm house out into the cold, unless you are bundled up and protected from the cold, may make you ill.

Don't try to show people that you are "tough." Nobody is so tough that he can run around in the severe cold without proper winter clothes. A little cold or chill may lead to that dangerous illness, pneumonia, and that would be very serious.

Then, too, this is likely to be accident weather. People aren't so careful about looking out for cars this weather.

Now here's another letter from Rita Netzel, of 402 Hancock street, Pittsburgh. She writes:

"I think some of my members didn't get a membership card. I thought I had more than 28 members. We have no kind of parties now because it is too cold and we have no coal or wood. If each of my members could give three cents or maybe five cents, we could send or make a party and collect it for the poor. Each one of my members is up to their pledges. This summer we will organize a sewing class for girls and baseball for the boys."

It's fine that you have your whole class interested in the Junior Patrol, Rita, but please don't forget that to be members they must all sign the Junior Patrol pledge and send it into headquarters.

A copy of the pledge is just as good as the printed one.

Mary Margaret Gorman, of 463 McKee avenue, Monessen, is another captain heard from today. She sends six pledges, we are hoping that she will get at least four more members in her patrol so that we can send her an armband.

To My VALENTINE

A GOOD many years have rolled by since the first "Valentine" came into being. But . . . those three little words are still being murmured, written sung with old-fashioned meaning in modern manner.

So that it's small wonder so many of today's Valentines are the good-to-eat variety as well as being good-to-look-at! That's why the candy stores of this city are putting their best foot foremost these days . . . racking their brains for original packages and assortments. TODAY'S candy Valentine will be the best yet!

THE SUN-TELEGRAPH

In Mayfair

-With-

Patricia Pitt

Hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of Pittsburgh music-lovers braved the nipping weather to hear the Minneapolis Symphony and nine-year-old Ruth Slenczynski as piano soloist, last night in Syria Mosque.

A childish beruffled yellow frock was worn by the little pianist, who was applauded and applauded. And in the boxes many, including Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., president of the Symphony Society, stood up to see her better.

It was an excellent evening. During intermission everyone was talking about the plump little child prodigy. And the Minneapolis Symphony, too, particularly after the second half of the program.

I noticed a group from Sewickley—debutante Fredericka Holdship, Elizabeth George and Emily Stuart. During intermission they were talking with Jane Sloan and other friends. Jane wore a black crepe gown with a bodice of dusty blue crepe, and Fredericka was in bright red crepe.

Deep red crepe, so dark that it looked black from a distance, was the smart choice of Mrs. Gordon Fisher, Jr., there with her mother, Mrs. Edward Vose Babcock, in black velvet.

The Edwin Rheas were there, with Mrs. Rhea wearing a black velvet gown, cut wide over the shoulders to form brief sleeves; Mrs. T. C. Jenkins and Elizabeth Jenkins.

Others I noticed were Dr. Thomas S. Baker, Mrs. George Pomeroy Bassett, Jr., Elizabeth Macfarlane, Mrs. John E. Nelson and her daughter, Peggy.

Bettie Guiler wore a dinner gown in jumper-dress style. The long skirt and jumper were of black crepe; the blouse of chartreuse green chiffon, fashioned with puff sleeves. I had a glimpse of Louise Evans and of her mother, Mrs. Henry Oliver Evans, and of scores more of faithful concert-goers.

Mayfairians to Attend Valentine Parties Tonight

After a season of concerts, society will become more frivolous this evening. Many will attend Valentine parties, although Valentine's day officially won't be here until Wednesday.

But with Valentine's day being Ash Wednesday this year, festivities had to be moved up a bit. Tonight Longue Vue Country Club will have a dinner-dance, Valentine decorations and all. And there'll be Valentine celebrations at other clubs, too.

Tonight Mrs. John McC Wilson will entertain at a small dinner at the Pittsburgh Golf Club honoring Anne Elizabeth Hillman and Benjamin Harvey Kountz, who will be married Monday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock in the Hillman home.

Anne is the sub-deb daughter of the junior John Hartwell Hillmans, and Mr. Kountz is a son of the George McClellan Kountzes.

Friday Club Hears Talk By Flynn

MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

"The only talent which gets paid is the talent of making money. It might be a useful talent if it could be harnessed to another utility, but it is not the noblest talent," John T. Flynn, author of "Investment Trusts Gone Wrong," said yesterday when he spoke before the Friday Morning Club. Mr. Flynn's subject was "The Economic Consequence of Riches."

Time was when large fortunes were considered of great value to the communities, Mr. Flynn observed, saying that this country had slowly developed into a land that is ruled economically, politically, culturally and socially by rich men. "The era of the millionaire," began around 1896 and Mark Hanna was its apostle, he stated. The peculiar thing, Mr. Flynn said, is that the situation came about in this country of all the countries in the world.

Cabinet and diplomatic posts have been held by men of great wealth and degrees have been conferred upon them when they had no other claim to academic honors than that they had made money.

Incidentally, Mr. Flynn said, rackets go back to the days of early Rome, when the fire department was privately owned and the business manager bargained with the owner of a burning house while the fire department waited for him to come to terms.

The speaker talked of the two kinds of goods which economists recognize—consumable goods that are bought and used immediately and capital goods, things bought for long term use. The more a man makes the less he spends in consumable goods and the more in capital goods, which means, he said, that there is less and less for others to spend in consumable goods.

Mr. Flynn believes corporations should be used for socially useful purposes and that this can be done only by Federal regulation and direction. The bill which will make the New York Stock Exchange subject to the people of the United States is one weapon towards this end and the securities act is another, he stated.

WALKING INTO SPRING DAYS

By PRUNELLA WOOD

IT SEEMS TO BE a pump season so far this spring, in lusty contrast with the high oxford after winter dwindled off last year.

And it seems that blue will be a great success in shoes, both severe and dressy, for the girls know that nothing else looks quite so well with a blue ensemble.

The sandal is sneaking back into daytime shoes for wear with slightly formal frocks, the one-strap cut-out model already in the lead. Perforations are holding their own as a spring style note, too, despite all the chatter about their "air cooled" talents which ceased to be news a year ago.

Pipings and appliques of one leather on another are taking on new intricacies with the season, but it is all done in a restrained manner.

Friske Frolic Attended by 500 Guests

More elaborate and original than ever before, the annual Artists and Adsters Friske Frolic was staged in the William Penn Hotel last night by the Women's Advertising Club, and was attended by 500 guests.

These entered the ballroom through a huge keyhole. The entire width and length of the balcony railing was covered to represent the walls of a brick house on the window sills of which stood milk bottles or flower pots.

Clothes lines were strung from side to side and suspended from them were clothes, legitimate advertising signs and a number of ballyhoes on which some members with original ideas had displayed their sense of humor.

Keyholes with eyes peering through were at all the balcony windows, and a monster keyhole with a blinking eye was placed at the back of the stage, two huge glistening keys framing the stage-front.

The wall lights had been converted into cellophane lampposts with original street signs. Other alluring signs pointed the way to the peep show where models appeared in latest lingerie modes.

HITCH-HIKERS

Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance

By MARION BRUNOT

Unpleasant Consequences Often Await Them

The man who gave it to her was a criminal.

But the girl managed to take his car and drive off to a police station, and now the man is in jail awaiting trial.

The girl was a hitch-hiker.

How romantic it sounds. Hiking in California where the sun shines warm and the roads are wide. Standing on the side of the highway and having your few clothes strapped to your back and watching for a car that may give you a glimpse into some one else's life.

There comes a big limousine. And you wave. But on it travels, and all you see is the dust behind it. Then comes the flivver. But it is overloaded already. Like flies are the people in that car. And on it whirrs, and you watch the smoke from the exhaust pipe.

Finally a lone man lets you hop in beside him. And you learn he is a bandit, and you plan to expose him. Your chance comes, and you get a share of the reward melon offered for his capture.

Oh, you're on top of the world.

But, wait a minute. What if that bandit had been more suspicious? What if he had been the sort who trusts no woman? Well, the girl hitch-hiker might have been lying at the side of the highway, and with only the coroner to spell her tale.

Many female hitch-hikers when they climb in beside a stranger are baiting for insult. Impudent familiarities or real crime may await them.

Are you as anxious for a ride as all that?

You may have a wildness in you. Craving for excitement may fill your idle hours. Getting on a street car in Bloomfield may not have any appeal.

That stranger in the car may say something different to you than the boy friend does. He may be a strata higher socially. And so you dream on.

THERE ARE CONSEQUENCES

Remember, sister, consequences of some sort follow everything we do. Strangers aren't riding along the road just to make it easy for them and you to slide down the church aisle together.

It is hard to stay in an unpleasant environment. People who don't seem to appreciate you. A mother who is too busy to listen. A father who wouldn't listen even if he had the time. These aren't all they are cracked up to be.

You admire the girl on the big poster. You watch curiously the girl who used to live on your street in no better house than yours, and who now has a roadster and a fur coat.

You may rest assured everyone of them have paid some price or other. And are you willing to do the same? Or do you want the fun? And are planning to let the bills hold over?

Watch out, sister. The romance of hitch-hiking may all lie in the reading.

* * *

Dear Miss Brunot:

My boy friend Bill works in the mills, and he always is asking me to marry him. He is a steady worker, and everybody says: "Oh, Bill. He'll always have a job." I love this big boy friend when he boasts about slugging the wise guy who has been too fresh. But when he gets serious, his hands look so big and he is awkward, although he wears good clothes.

I work in a hat department downtown, and I love to sell hats.

LAURA JANE.

KEEP JOB

Bill sounds almost too good to pass up. He may be president of that mill some day. Yet if you only like him when he is a cave man, it would be a little hard on Bill to say yes. You better hold on to the hat job a little while longer until you are more certain of your heart. If I know Bill, I would say he will wait. A fellow of his type usually knows his own mind, even about the one girl.

The chances are when you are tired of selling hats some warm August day, you'll just nestle down to Bill. And then there will be wedding bells.

Unhappy John writes:

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am only 17 and am in love with a girl of 21. She has told me never to call her up, but that she will call me whenever she can see me. She used to call me up often. But lately scarcely ever. It worries me, for I love her very much. She has an employer who is very jealous of her. And she gives that as her reason.

What shall I do? I cannot endure it much longer.

UNHAPPY JOHN.

When a girl puts you off for another man, it is as plain as the nose on your face, she likes the other man better than you. So brace up, John, and look elsewhere for consolation. This girl is too old for you, anyway. The chances are she is stringing you. It is your place to do the telephoning and not hers.

SHINY GIRL!

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"Woman of Fashion" means in our day "shiny girl." "Fashionable" does not mean any more a vision of real lace, diamond collars, plumes, brocade, ivory fans, gold and pearl opera glasses and "toothpick shoes." Fashion is no longer "furbelows."

The word fashionable itself seems to be vanishing quite away. "Chic" and "smart" have crowded it off the floor show. And to be chic and smart Jill must have that preened and glossy look as of a dweller in a bandbox. She must look new and shiny like a new-minted quarter. The whole world shouts to her, "Be immaculate to be beautiful and you must be beautiful to be chic, and, if you aren't quite on the gold ball of the tip-top of the flag pole, you must be trying to get there!"

Every little thing must shine. They who serve out advice to girls and women make it very important that they must be attractive to the rest of the world. And to be attractive they must be "sleek." Or slick, if you like that better. It has a little wider meaning. Every "ad" that meets a girl's eye tells her she must not fail to shine or nobody will love her!

Skin must be as blank of flaws as an eggshell. Teeth must not be just white, they must glitter. Eyes must flash. The radiance of the stars must not be more brilliant than they. Fingernails must outdo the mirrors on the wall. Hair must be sister to the copper pan in an Old World kitchen for positive lines, polish and color. From foot to crown Jill must be all shiny. She must be a raindrop on the tip of a daisy petal after a rain; the new gold pin in a baby's dress; a feather from the Emperor's nightingale; a diamond in a glass of spring water; the flower on a luster tea cup.

Can she be all these and this and them that smartness demands if a little gel wants to be looked at or even—they dare to declare—LOVED? Can she? I don't know if she attains the ultimate—but look around you and you will see that she TRIES!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Gratitude Note

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Recently my sister passed away in a small town in a distant state. The women's organization of that town sent my mother, who is a widow, and me a check, as we are in poor circumstances.

Please, Mrs. Beeckman, advise me how to thank this organization for the check, as my mother and I were very friendly with the women of the club. E.

How very kind you are to permit me to help you about this . . . I appreciate it so much. And how very kind these good women were to you and your mother. We must write them a most appreciative kind of note, and perhaps this would suggest it to you:

Dear Mrs. Crane:

Mother has asked me to write you to tell you how deeply, how very deeply, we appreciate your and the Women's Organization's great kindness and great goodness to us. Will you please let us thank you, and will you please tell the other members of our gratitude? We were so deeply touched by your wonderful thoughtfulness of us that we find it dificult to find words to tell you about it. But do know that your check was a godsend and such a wonderful help to us in these dificult days? Thank you, thank you, with our hearts full of gratitude.

Mother hopes to see you all again soon, and then to tell you in person her appreciation. And we both send dearest love and best wishes.

Most sincerely yours,

Announcement Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—My fiance gave me an engagement ring for Christmas. I would like to have an informal dinner party next week and make an announcement to my friends, but Mother says she doesn't think it proper since I won't be married for six months. She thinks one should wait until about one month before the marriage to announce the engagement.

2—Would it be correct to use correspondence cards, with gilt edges, to write my invitations on for this party?

T.

1—Since you already have your ring, and probably are eager to make the announcement of your engagement so that you can wear your ring as soon as possible, I suggest by all means that you have this announcement-party at once. There really isn't any reason (unless there is a family reason) why you should wait to make the announcement a month before your wedding.

2—White note paper, double-sheeted and of excellent texture, would be the best thing for you to use when writing your invitations. Correspondence cards aren't very popular nowadays, and gilt edges on cards aren't in good taste.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Playing Your Partner's Hand

"Partner, I wish you would bid your own hand and not mine. I can make all the calls required by the cards I hold."

This is one of the most frequent complaints registered at the Bridge table. It is undoubtedly true that it is a common fault for even good players to seek to bid their partner's cards as well as their own. The basis of this is a fear which almost all of us possess that the poor partner sitting opposite to us is not able to properly assay the value of his cards and needs the assistance of our superior intelligence to guide him to the correct declaration. In order to avoid the tendency to make bids on the values they believe partner holds rather than on what they have themselves, expert players have adopted what is known as the Forcing Pass—in other words, a demand that partner either bid further if his holdings make it probable that a higher contract can be fulfilled, or double an adverse bid if it seems apparent to him, on the basis of the previous bidding, that the opponents have overstepped the safe limits of their hands.

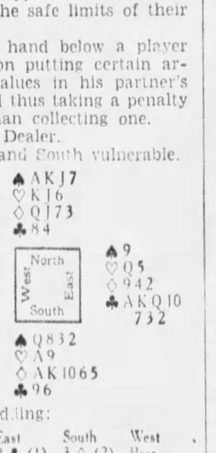
North, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ♣ (1)	3 ◇ (2)	Pass
4 ◇ (3)	5 ♣	5 ♠ (4)	Pass
Pass (5)	6 ♣ (6)	6 ◇ (7)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—Probably East would have been better advised to have made a Jump Overcall of his vulnerable opponent's Opening bid, although, with South's hand, such a call would have proved ineffective.

2—South has a splendid fit with North's Opening bid. The Forcing Takeout is therefore justified on three-plus honor-tricks.

3—North does not need to crowd the bidding. His partner's Forcing Takeout assures that at least a game contract shall be reached.

4—South now shows support for his partner's bid, even though non-vulnerable opponents have forced the bidding beyond the game limit.

5—North's hand is not the stuff of which Slams are made, and he therefore correctly passes the contract of five.

6—Of course, East has no idea that this contract can be fulfilled, but he feels quite certain that five spades can be made by North and South. Therefore he elects to take what he hopes will be a paying sacrifice.

7—This bid is bad. South has no right to assume that North has a singleton club and, as clubs are practically sure to be opened, it is almost certain that six diamonds cannot be made. Against this South is certain, from his own holdings and his partner's bidding, that a contract of six clubs cannot be made. Half a loaf is better than no bread at all, and South, deprived of his vulnerable game, should accept the remaining alternative—namely, a Double of the adverse sacrifice bid.

In the play two tricks were immediately lost, and South then made the balance of the tricks. The result was the defeat of the Slam contract by one. Had East been doubled at a contract of six clubs he must have lost one diamond, two hearts and one spade as a minimum. As a matter of fact, he could have been defeated even more severely with an Opening trump lead, which would have been quite natural in view of the bidding.

A Sequel to Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Mary and Noel Meet at the Altar

Fortunately Avis herself had put into my hand the weapon I had just used to compel her obedience. When I had first spoken of locking the door upon her hours before, she had evinced such terror that I knew she was a victim of claustrophobia, so I was not surprised when she started toward me with outstretched hands, crying:

"Don't—don't do that! I'll come down. You've beaten me; but don't lock me up."

AVIS COMPLIMENTED

"See that you behave yourself, then," Lillian said grimly, as she took the girl gently but firmly by the arm and wheeled her toward the door. "Just remember that I'm going to have my eyes on you every second, and if you try to pull anything, I'll whisk you up here and lock the door on you before you have time to breathe. But if you behave yourself, nobody will guess anything save that you are the most striking looking girl at the wedding.

"And that's no lie," she said in burlesqued intonation, as she gave Avis what she calls "the one-and-twice over." "Just live up to your looks, my good girl, and you'll enjoy yourself hugely, I'll predict."

I saw Avis stiffen at the words "my good girl," which I knew Lillian had used purposely. But at the compliment she visibly preened herself, and by the time she, Lillian, Katherine and I had reached the lower floor, she was, if not in good humor, at least not in a bad one.

"Better tell your mother and Mr. Veritzen now why you are not going to be a bridesmaid," Lillian counselled, "then they will not be looking for you in the procession."

"All right," Avis said, and as I went to the front of the room to speak to the pianist, I heard her voluble but low-toned explanation of the impossibility of wearing the bridesmaid's gown picked out for her.

"My foolish, fastidious darling," Mrs. Arlen fatuously murmured, and Philip Veritzen added a compliment upon the becomingness of the green and silver gown. Both of the older people were too schooled in the social nuances to have treated her announcement in any other than a casual manner, and as I gave the signal to the pianist I felt that one more danger to the success of the wedding arrangements had been passed.

GUESTS SEATED

Our small orchestra had been playing softly while Bob, with William and Henry assisting him, had been seating the guests in the chairs on either side of the aisle flanked with roses. Just before my signal to the pianist, the boys walked down to the front of the room, drawing broad white ribbons along either side of the aisle, fastening them to the front standard of flowers, then stepping to one side of the improvised altar.

The music of the orchestra stopped and the first familiar strains of the Lohengrin wedding march came from the piano. The Reverend Mr. Summers—who, I reflected whimsically, did not know how nearly he had been dragged out of bed to perform this ceremony nearly twenty hours before—took his place in front of the altar, and from a side door Noel and Ronald came to join him.

Noel was pale, and his face was set in lines of anxiety. He looked like anything but a jubilant bridegroom, and I had a sudden feeling of irritation against him in spite of my knowledge of the secret fear which had set his face in those lines. But I felt that I could not bear the interpretation Avis Arlen would put upon that strained look. Her vanity would interpret it as reluctance to go though the ceremony with Mary, in spite of the humiliating truths Noel had spoken to her the night before.

Ronald was as flushed as Noel was pale, and he was almost as harassed looking. I knew that he was saying to himself "ring, ring, ring," and that he had a very lively fear of forgetting the point in the ceremony at which he was to produce it.

A BEAUTIFUL VISION

But both faces lost their anxiety as down the stairs, with slow, beautiful movement, came the small wedding procession. Ronald's eyes rested for a second with brotherly approval upon his winsome sister, Carolyn, leading the procession, and then his face broke into beaming pleasure at the sight of Marion behind her in her rose-colored gown.

Noel's eyes saw neither the maid of honor nor the bridesmaid, lovely as they were. His eyes went swiftly past them, unseeing, and fastened themselves upon Mary—surely, I told myself fatuously, the most beautiful bride that ever approached an altar.

With starry eyes searching through her veil for Noel's eyes, Mary was an exquisite vision, and as she came closer and her eyes found Noel's, I did not wonder at the radiance that came into the boy's face, or at the smile with which he welcomed her.

"Dearly beloved!"—The sonorous voice of the clergyman began intoning the impressive old service, and with eyes and ears divided between the bridal picture and Avis Arlen, who sat directly across from me, I followed the words of the service feverishly. At the words, "If anyone can show just cause," I found my eyes going fearfully to Avis Arlen's face, and, in the old wives' phraseology, "the sight almost left them" as I saw her start upward from her chair.

How to Keep Well

Mastoiditis Common in 'Season of Colds'

This is the season when mastoid is especially prevalent among young children. It is probable that the increase in the number of cases of mastoiditis at this time of year can be traced to the prevalence of colds, coughs and tonsilitis in bad and stormy weather.

Dr. Copeland

We used to believe that mastoid was a fatal disease. We know now that when the disturbance is recognized in its early stages and proper measures are taken, speedy cure is possible. Despite the tremendous advances made in the treatment of mastoiditis, many still fear the disease. They are alarmed by the conflicting stories concerning the disorder.

May I assure the worried parent that the disease can be successfully treated by operation. The mastoid operation has been so perfected that it is no longer a dangerous procedure. Danger exists only when the disease is neglected or the operation delayed.

Mastoid disease or "mastoiditis," as it is more commonly called, is an inflammation within the mastoid bone. This bone is the prominence felt behind the ear. It contains the mastoid "antrum" or air space, which connects with the middle ear. No doubt you know that the middle ear communicates with the nose through the "eustachian tube."

Germs of the common cold, cough or tonsilitis travel from the nose or throat through the eustachian tube to the ear. There they set up an inflammation which may extend into the mastoid.

Mastoiditis frequently occurs after a severe cold or infection of the nose or throat. It is especially common after an attack of influenza or pneumonia.

As a rule, the sufferer first complains of a severe ear ache. The pain is relieved when a discharge appears from the affected ear. Unless drainage is sufficient, the pain returns. There may be marked swelling behind the ear.

When the disease occurs in adults, it is easy to determine the source of trouble. An adult can accurately locate and describe the pain. But when the victim is young he is frightened and inaccurately describes the pain.

The young sufferer is restless, irritable and runs a high fever. The picture is confusing and unless X-ray pictures are taken the diagnosis may be confused with some other ailment. The X-ray helps to show whether the mastoid really is involved.

Relief and cure sometimes occur without operation. But in no instance, should home remedies be resorted to and no treatment should be given unless under the supervision of a physician.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Eyebrow weeding isn't so painful if hot applications are used before the plucking begins. On cosmetic counters you will find lotions that are used for this purpose too. Don't pull with a jerk; the hair is likely to break at the point where it emerges from the skin leaving a horrid stub. Pull slowly as the hair slants. Don't do too much weeding on the under line; when the little lamberquin is placed thin, eyes look smaller, are less expressive. Sculpture the eyebrow so it follows the mount of the eye socket; that is where nature intended it to be.

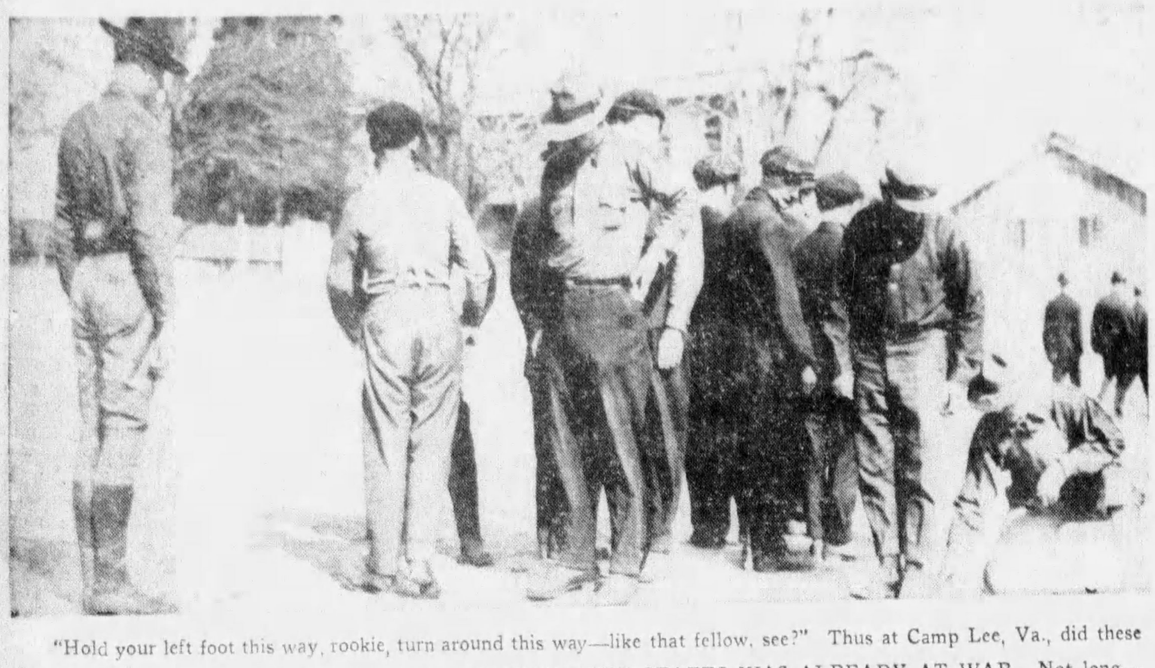
To avoid wrinkles, carry the calm, serene countenance. Eat enough starchy foods and proteins to keep tissues solid. Get eight hours sleep; it is during sleep that cells make repairs. Use soap and warm water to keep the skin surface clean. Rinse with warm water, dry gently, use a heavy cream, tapping it in briskly to keep blood streams dancing. Let the cream remain on over night. In the morning use cold water freely. Ice is good. Be gentle when tapping round the eyes. Tissues there haven't much resistance, can't stand heavy pressure.

Suitable Sweets.

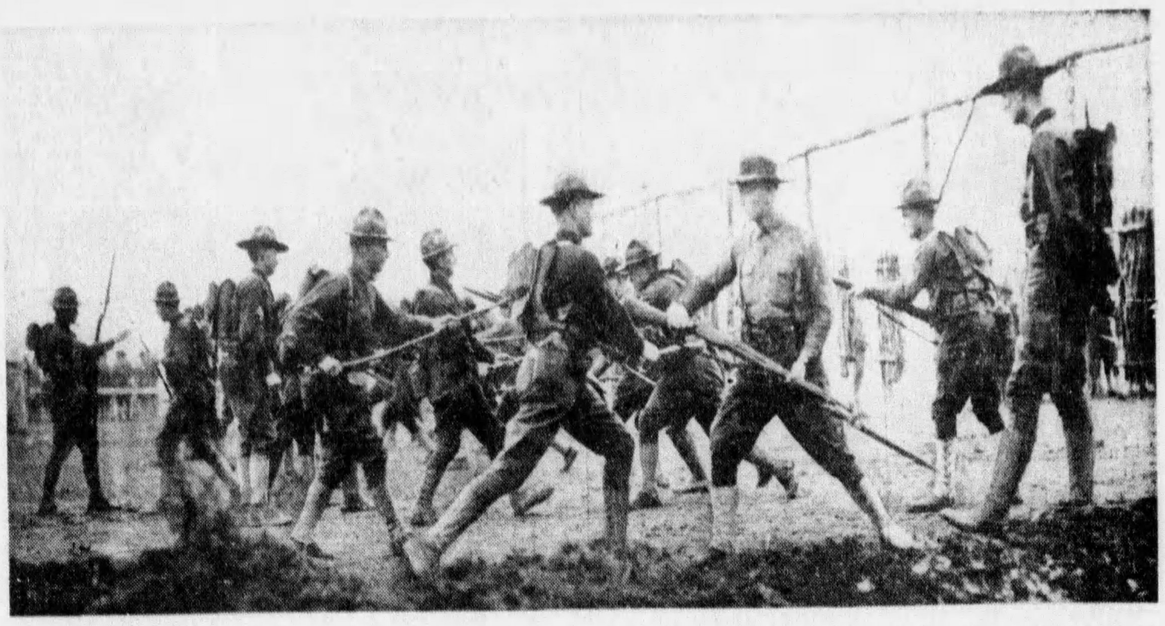
Suitable sweets for children include raisins, dates, jelly, jam, preserves, fruits that are raw, ripe or cooked, simple candies, cake and cookies that are not too sweet, custards, puddings, ice cream, fruit sherbets and other simple desserts.

'THE WAR AT HOME:' THE PATH TO GLORY—OR DEATH!

Photographs on This Page From the Collection of Leo Sable, 80th Division Photographer



"Hold your left foot this way, rookie, turn around this way—like that fellow, see?" Thus at Camp Lee, Va., did these Pittsburgh district men take their first war lesson AFTER UNITED STATES WAS ALREADY AT WAR. Not long—



—later men of the same type, just a few weeks away from their jobs in offices and factories, total strangers to army life, had progressed to such training as this, for the most part hasty, in how to kill and how to DEFEND themselves—

—following their perilous journey over the Atlantic on over-loaded vessels such as this (Editor's Note: This specific picture shows the arrival home of Pittsburgh's 80th Division) to take their places in a human slaughterhouse: France—

—where such scenes as this were common as Red Cross workers, shells bursting about them in a flaming countryside, labored unceasingly to wrest back from the God of War thousands of lives thus doomed in many cases to live for years—

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Mancuso May Lose Form. Giant Chances at Stake. Another Theory On Ball. | Byrd to Succeed Ruth. Old Floor Stars Favored. Wolf Keeps Boxer Going.

With a standpat lineup and a complete freedom from holdout trouble, the Giants have been sitting prettier than any other club in either of the big baseball leagues, but the first break in the pennant market against them, and possibly a serious break, comes in the fact that Catcher Gus Mancuso is in a hospital at Houston, Tex., stricken with typhoid fever. That may prove a hard blow to the chances of the Perrys for another flag. Mancuso is said to have only a "slight attack" of typhoid, but even so that may be enough to make him late in reporting at training camp, and after typhoid a convalescent usually is slow in recovering his strength and pep.

Gus Mancuso

It would handicap the Giants if they were forced to start the race with an understudy behind the bat, and it might be fatal to their chances if the typhoid effects were to leave Mancuso below par for the whole season. With all due respect to Carl Hubbell, Manager Terry, Mel Ott, Blondy Ryan and the rest, the smart manner in which Mancuso handled the New York pitchers, and the workhorse service he gave in catching 142 games, had about as much to do with the Giants' championship success last year as any other factor. If typhoid leaves a drag on Mancuso the entire club will be hurt.

SEES NEW BALL AIDING SPEED PITCHERS

One nice thing about that new ball to be used by the National League this year is that you can figure it out any way you wish. If it doesn't suit you from one angle, you can look at it from another. At least, the varying views of the players indicate this to be the case. Before the two big leagues voted on standardizing the pellet, a poll of the National League managers showed only one skipper casting his ballot against a livelier apple. The lone opponent was Bill Terry, and his stand reflected a conviction that such a change would hurt is Giants. However, Terry now professes to believe that the new pill will help his club by assisting long hitters like himself and Mel Ott.

Recently Ben Cantwell, Boston pitcher, cited the effectiveness of Dolf Luque with the American League ball in the final game of the World Series as evidence that curve-ball hurlers would have nothing to fear from the new rocket. And now comes Bob Smith, of the same staff, to express the opinion that the 1934 sphere is going to help the fast-ball pitchers. Smith admits it will aid such hitters as Klein, Berger, Terry, Ott, Hafey, Babe Herman, Hack Wilson and others who go for the long ones, but figures that fast-ball slingers should like it, because the lower and thinner stitching will reduce air resistance and they will be able to get more zip on their swifties. So probably in the end, he reasons, it will all even up.

BYRD TO BE GROOMED FOR RUTH'S PLACE

While baseball fans at large are speculating as to who will be Babe Ruth's successor in the Yankee outfield when the Bambino has reached the end of the trail, Manager Joe McCarthy intimates that Sam Byrd is the player to whom will fall the task of filling the biggest pair of shoes to be left vacant since the fading of Honus Wagner and Ty Cobb. The Yankee boss says Ben Chapman will be in left field every day next season, Earl Combs and Fred Walker will split the work in center, and Byrd, with more experience and poise than Walker, will be Ruth's alternate in right.

Sam Byrd

McCarthy declines to mention the number of games in which he expects Ruth to participate this year, replying only, "Oh, as many as he wants to play." But Joe makes it clear that Byrd will be in there every day Ruth is out, and says Sam is the utility outfielder of whom he expects most during the next two years; that Byrd can hit left-handers, is fast in the field and on the bases, and with proper encouragement should fill the bill when Ruth is done.

VET RATES OLD-TIME FLOORMEN SUPERIOR

The following letter, dealing with the relative merits of old and new floor stars, was received from "An Old-Time Fan":

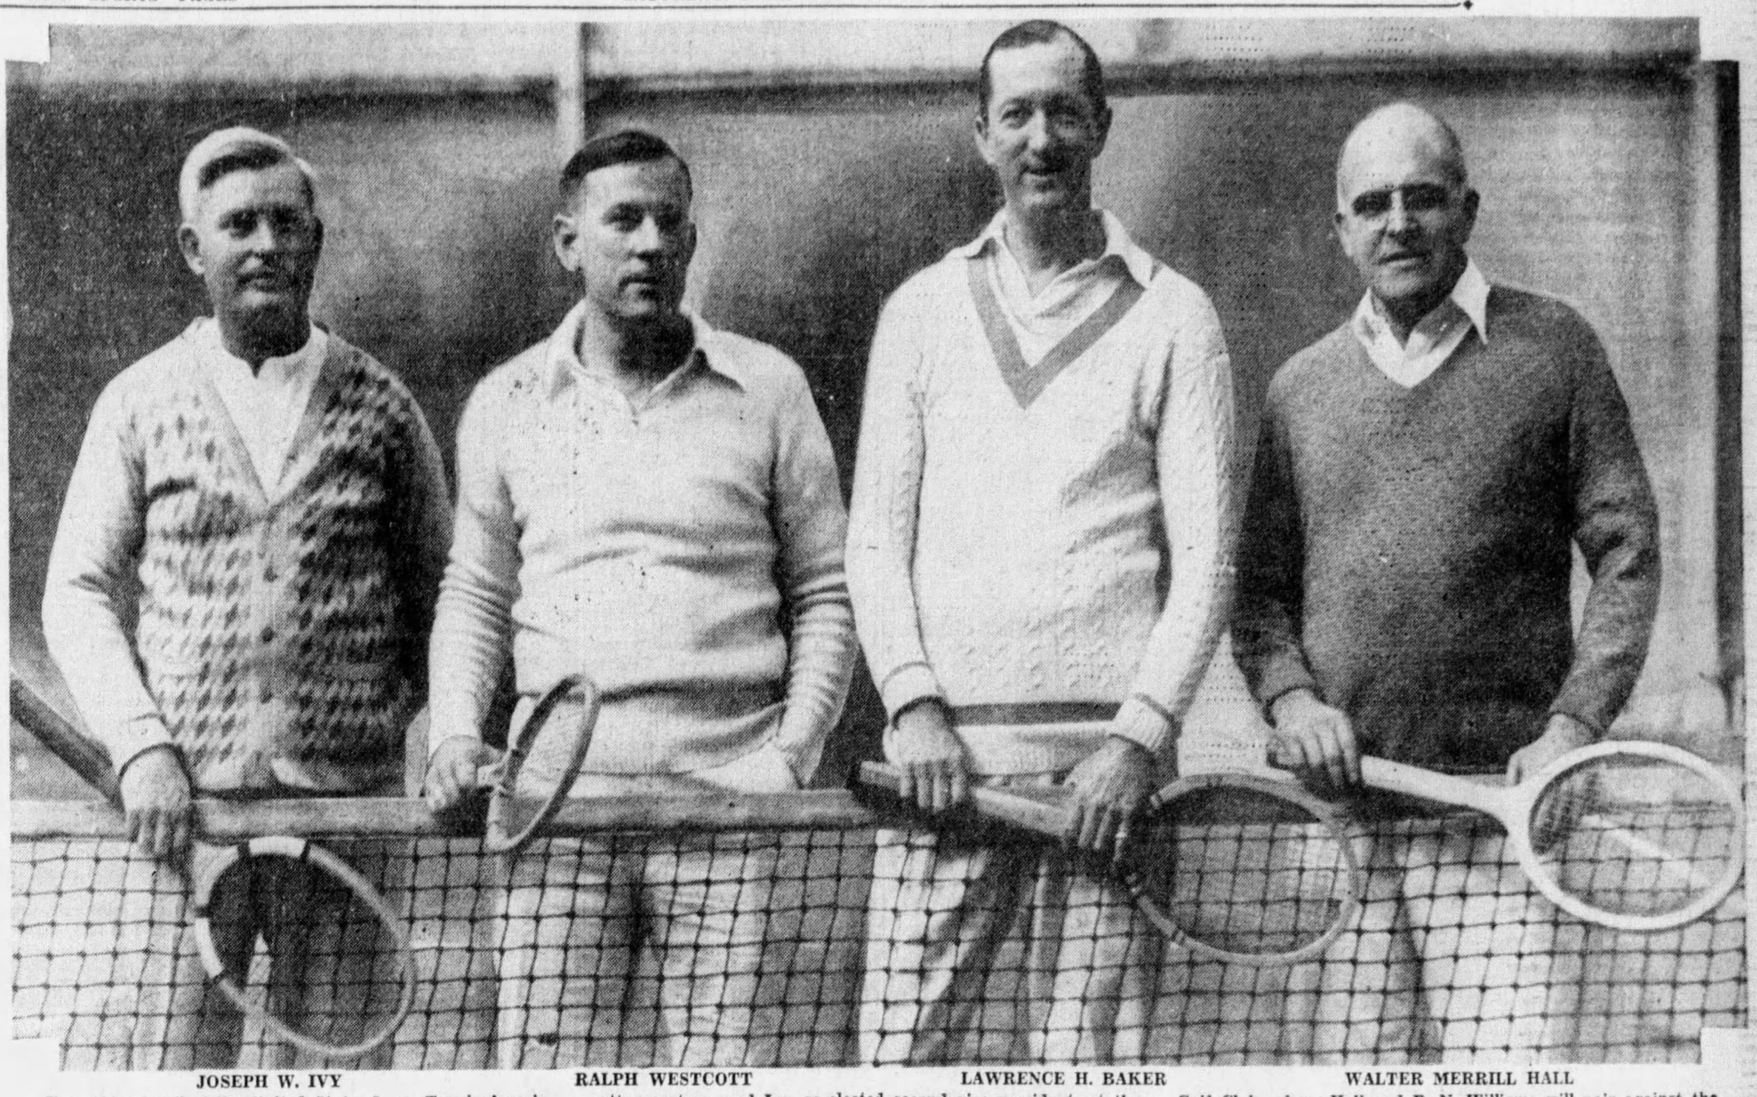
"In the Sun-Telegraph recently I read that Johnny Freund had rated Harry Hough as the best basketball player of all time. Mr. Freund would not know me, but I second his motion on Hough. In the '90's I followed basketball in the East, including the New England states. Around 1900 I watched Bill Haddock play in the old market house, and also attended games in the old Lyceum at Fifth avenue and Grant street. Later I followed the South Side team in Odd Fellows' Hall, when Leibau, Nickle, Anderson, Weitzel and others were active, and afterward watched the reorganized South Side five in Hough's heyday. So on right up to date, and only last week I saw a couple of college teams play. After seeing most of the boys play, and noting the change in refereeing and manner of playing, including the cage the old teams used, if I were a betting man and such an arrangement were possible, I would take a team including Hough at forward, Heinie Leibau for tossing fouls, and Bill Powell at center, and would not hesitate to wager all I had on that team against any five of today."

MANDELL PERILS SELF TO SUPPORT FAMILY

One of the boxing game's pitiable sights at present is the spectacle of the once great Sammy Mandell, long lightweight champion of the world, being used as a punching bag by opponents who would have had no business in the ring with him in his heyday. In Windsor last fall the slow-moving Iowa Joe Rivers punished him severely. Several others beat him up later. In El Paso the other night Tony Herrera knocked him out. Fearing he will be hurt seriously, friends of Mandell have redoubled their efforts to induce him to quit the ring, but Sammy will not listen, and it looks as though it will be up to the promoters to force his retirement by refusing to put him on.

Sammy Mandell

Sam Greene, who knows the conditions, says it isn't the usual punch-drunk hope of being able to pull a big comeback that keeps Mandell going. It's an urgent need for money. The fortune that he made in his palmy days is gone. There is nothing left of the generous purses he received for fights with Jimmy McLarnin, Sid Terris, Tony Canzoneri, Al Singer and others. Boxing is the only trade he knows, and he sticks to it because he has a wife and 6-year-old son in Rockford, Ill., looking to him for support. That's the tragedy of it. In his mind, the risks he takes by prolonging his career when the old speed of hand and foot have departed are of secondary importance. Mandell must know by now that he can no longer cope with the younger fellows, but he is willing to hazard beating after beating that his family may enjoy greater comforts of living. His continuance in the trade is heroic, rather than presumptuous.



JOSEPH W. IVY — RALPH WESTCOTT — LAWRENCE H. BAKER — WALTER MERRILL HALL

Four "big shots" of the United States Lawn Tennis Association annual convention, being held in Pittsburgh for the first time. Hall is to be elected president; Baker, treasurer, and Westcott, secretary, and Ivy, re-elected second vice president, at the business session at the P. A. A. today. Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture shows the quartet on the indoor courts at the Pittsburgh Golf Club, where Hall and R. N. Williams will pair against the Drs. John and David O'Loughlin, local stars, in an exhibition doubles match following a dinner tonight.

It hardly is likely that the United States Military Academy's varsity basketball team, to be referred to hereafter as Army, the Cadets, the Sojers, the Pointers or anything else that may come to mind is especially confident as it prepares to tackle Pitt's high-riding basketeers in the Pitt Stadium Pavilion tonight.

Tom Clifford

Army basketball teams have fared but poorly in previous clashes with the Panthers, especially since 1924. Court relations were inaugurated back in 1916, when Pitt won, 28 to 13. Ten games have been played since that time, with Pitt winning seven of 'em. The record follows:

1917—Pitt	28—Army	13
1917—Pitt	28—Army	31
1921—Pitt	37—Army	31

RECALL '29 ROUT

Local fans who took in the '29 struggle never will forget the way in which the Pitts went to town that night. The Cadets came here with an unbeaten record and with a highly touted team. Pitt wasn't so badly off, either, what with Charley Hyatt and Eddie Baker in the lineup. Hyatt and Baker made their presences felt, too, both scoring more points than the entire Army team. If memory serves, the Panthers counted some 20 times before the Sojers broke the ice.

As has been the case in the past, Pitt figures to outspeed the Pointers in tonight's battle. A new team since they trimmed Notre Dame here some weeks ago, the Panthers have picked up additional speed with each passing game, and have knocked over West Virginia, Wash-Jeff and Duquesne in a row.

In Capt. Jack Hillis and Wright Hiatt, the Cadets will show a brace of crack performers, however. Jack Clifford, a sophomore, will start at one of the guards, paired off with Capt. Hillis. Clifford rates well as a scoring threat. The Cadets will make it plenty tough if the local boys enter the game too confident.

The Dukes had an easy time of it defeating Thiel last night in a return battle, such as it was, in the Duquesne gymnasium, 44 to 25.

Dudey Moore, as valuable a player as the Dukes have on the roster, was out of action with a severe cold, but the remainder of the Red and Blue regulars went right to work and piled up a first-half lead of 6 points at 20 to 14. Thiel wasted five minutes in the second half without scoring, while the Dukes were amassing a substantial advantage.

In a preliminary, the Duquesne

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE TOAST OF TOASTS—Lord William George Armstrong (1810-1900), the founder of the Elswick Works, in Newcastle-on-Tyne, pronounced one of the longest toasts on record at the banquet celebrating the launching of the "Victory," on April 15, 1887. Lord Armstrong, inventor of the famous ordnance, was originally a lawyer and a gifted orator. It is said that he held the attention of his audience throughout the entire toast on that memorable occasion. He received the baronetcy that same year.

RACQUET HEADS GATHERED IN CONFERENCE

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The annual meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, glorying apparently in the incongruity of a situation that plunks down deliberations over the destiny of a summer pastime in the midst of the severest local cold spell in 35 years, is scheduled to get under way in the ballroom of the P. A. A. here this afternoon. The conclave, open to the tennis public, though only duly qualified delegates may vote, brings together net representatives from virtually every section of the country and marks the first occasion on which the Steel City has been honored by the official presence of the reigning moguls of racquetdom.

The general session, following a buffet luncheon at the P. A. A. clubhouse, is expected to consume some five hours or more of what may prove rather spirited discussion and is slated to dilate upon and to determine a number of the most important problems with which a U. S. L. T. A. gathering ever has been called upon to contend.

IMPORTANT QUESTIONS UP

The attitude of the American group in the impending attempt of the International Tennis Federation to inaugurate and to control open tournament competition between amateurs and professionals; the compilation of a bill of major home events satisfactory to the conflicting interests and ambitions of the various segments of the parent body and to the hopes and desires of traditionally influential clubs; aim of the powerful Western L. T. A. to storm the historic citadel of the national ranking committee in endeavor to obtain higher rating than tenth for Chicago's favorite, George M. Lott; radical revision of the time-honored foot fault rule; switch of the national intercollegiate championships from their ancient sites, the grass courts of the Merion Cricket Club, to some type of hard-surface rectangle after 1934, and tightening of the age limit checkup in the conduct of junior, boys' and girls' tourneys are on the bill.

In the absence of President Harry S. Knox, lately of Chicago and now of Hoquiam, Wash., the seance will be headed by First Vice President Holcombe Ward. The election of the following group of nominees will be a formality of the affair: Walter Merrill Hall, New York, president; Holcombe Ward, New York, first vice president; Joseph W. Ivy, Kansas City, second vice president; Lawrence A. Baker, Washington, treasurer, and Ralph Westcott, Chicago, secretary.

GUESTS AT DINNER

Visitors from out of town will be guests of the P. T. A. at dinner at the Pittsburgh Golf Club immediately after the P. A. A. powwow. The meal, arranged by Chairman Robert C. Schmertz, of the P. T. A. committee on accommodations and entertainment, will be topped off by special exhibition doubles match on one of the two P. G. C. covered clay courts at 8:45. The contest will find R. Norris Williams II, twice national singles p[illegible] and Merrill Hall, N[illegible]e 1918 American [illegible] paired

JIM CAMPBELL DEFEATED IN FIRST BOUT

Last night, in the annual A. M. A. junior championship tournament, Jimmy took a lacing in his first round bout, being defeated by a chap he'd knocked out on a previous occasion. He telegraphed with his right, in fact he might as well have sent a postcard, his boxing was off and his hitting ineffective. Jackie Peters, of the Frawley A. C., of Mt. Washington, was the lad who beat him.

Eight knockouts were recorded on the 14-bout program, four of them being turned in by Pittsburgh Lyceum scrappers. The Lyceum punchers took no chances, either they won by knockouts or they lost devisions.

One boxer turned up with a pair of frozen ears and was refused permission to box by the commission physician. He was Stokey Stoken, of the McKeesport A. C. Stokey had to walk two miles to reach a street car and froze his autitory appendages en route. The summary:

147 Pound Class.

Ray Eberle, South Heights, defeated Frank Herp, Pittsburgh Lyceum, three rounds.

160 Pound Class.

Steve Kobeda, Pittsburgh Lyceum, knocked out Mike Delfonso, DeLuca A. C., second round.

175 Pound Class.

Heavyweight Class.

TENNIS MOGULS MEET HERE

off against Dr. David and Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. stars.

Nearly twoscore delegates, most of them members of the national executive committee, reached Pittsburgh yesterday morning, including Hall, Ivy, Baker and Westcott. A number of these took advantage of the hospitality extended by the P. G. A. to run through brisk racquet workouts. Others were driven through the sub-zero atmosphere to Homestead for tour of the upriver steel mills. Among the latter was Irving Wright, veteran Boston ace, who returned to the Monongahela valley after a lapse of 32 years, his lone previous jaunt thither having been during Princeton undergraduate days.

Last evening was given over to the annual dinner and meeting of the executive committee. Chuck Garland, famous Pittsburgh court product and current resident of Chicago, greeted many eastern and old home friends ere making early departure for the shores of Lake Michigan.

The executive session continued until long after midnight and devoted much time to consideration of the National championship card, to the open tournament controversy and, when all regular business had been disposed of, to Chicago's plea in behalf of Lott.

FAVOR OPEN PLAY

Surprisingly enough, perhaps, contemplation of the open amateur-professional project proved relatively harmonious, and in favor of open play. It appears to be pretty well agreed that former U. S. L. T. A. President Louis J. Carruthers will carry to the convention of the International Tennis Federation at Paris, March 16, instructions to the effect that the United States will support any recommendation or proposal permitting an amateur to engage in tournament, match or other competition with professionals under proper sanction of his own national association, this plan to be installed tentatively for a five-year period.

The executives likewise gave attention to the standardization of hard surface courts in connection with suggestions of Walter L. Pate, to the project of registering the ages of juniors, boys' and girls' aspirants with sectional or district associations, and to the invitation of the Ohio Valley Tennis Association that the 1935 U. S. L. T. A. congress be staged in Cincinnati.

The following are registered at the P. A. A.:

Jones W. Merserau, Irving C. Wright, E. C. Wright, William F. Rowland, J. M. Thurston, E. F. Kingman, Walter L. Pate, C. C. Johnson, F. D. Fulton, Paul W. Gibbons, Holcombe Ward, Capt. J. H. SOCCER CLUBS SEEK TITLE

By TOM BIRKS

The Old Carnegie and Arsenal elevens clash in the feature game of the Central District Soccer League this afternoon, the game being scheduled for the Beadling field, and the winner being certain of annexing the league title.

Whether Arsenal can adapt itself to the small Beadling field is a moot question. Very few clubs ever have been able to master the Beadling gridiron.

The game is booked to get under way at 3 o'clock and should attract a large crowd.

Other games in the circuit find Ambridge traveling to Leslie Park to meet the Rovers and Union Switch facing Clan Douglas.

Levinsky Victor By Weird Decision

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The heavyweights have a new spoiler today, a serious-faced, black-haired Italian youngster from the coal mining regions near East Monongahela, Charley Massera, 22 years old.

He came within a split decision last night of belting King Levinsky right out of Madison Square Garden's plans for a heavyweight title fight between the Chicago Kingfish and Primo Carnera in June. Unofficially he convinced the experts, and a slim crowd of 3,500 that Levinsky had been beaten, that the Kingfish won't do as title challenging material.

With most of the experts agreed that Massera had won at least six rounds, clearly entitling him to the decision, one judge voted for Levinsky, the other for Massera, and Referee Smith hauled off and presented a unique analysis of the situation. He didn't give anyone the tenth round, gave Massera four, Levinsky three, called two even, and awarded Levinsky the decision.

Pitt Swim Team Wins Over Delaware

Adlersberg, of Pitt, cracked the pool record for the 220-yard breast stroke when he covered the distance in 36 3-5 seconds. The summary:

Fancy diving—Won by Clark, Pitt; Wilson, Delaware, second; Schmieler, Pitt, third.

440-yard free style—Won by Hanna, Pitt; Carey, Delaware, second; Lewis, Pitt, third. Time—5:17 2-5.

400-yard relay—Won by Pitt (Chambers, Adlersberg, Kuhe, Stinner). Time—1:16 3-5.

Class A championship honors in both squash racquets and handball team competition may be determined this afternoon as leaders in the P. S. R. A. and City glove loops enter vital tests.

Disagreement in the upper sector of the squash league, which caused postponement of the P. A. A.-Keystone No. 2 fray last Saturday has been amicably settled with the pace-setting Winged Headers gaining their point of having tilts scheduled for their domain actually played upon their own courts. Partly as consequence of this decision and partly out of deference to the conflicting attraction of the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association annual meeting here today, tussles slated for the current date have been moved back to next Saturday, while the P. A. A.-K. A. C. No. 2 affair has been inserted as a feature of the Winged Head card this afternoon.

Only four of the customary five engagements will be run off this afternoon, the Dave O'Loughlin-Henry Blaxter session having been adjourned until after the week-end in order that O'Loughlin may take part in the special exhibition tennis soiree at the Pittsburgh Golf Club tonight.

Downtown Y. M. C. A., lurking in second place in the handball circuit ratings, can pass the top-situated Keystone A. C. squad and nail titular distinction to the mast by blanking the tail-end P. A. A. glovesters at the Y today. The Keystone crew has still a singles and a doubles joust left of its wind-up affair at the Y. M. H. A., but if Y. M. C. A. can repeat its earlier whitewash of the Red and Gray, even a win for Dick Koubek over Lou Alman and a verdict for the same K. A. C. ace and his brother Frank over Alman and Dave Olbum will fail to save the Keystone scalp.

In Class B of the handball wheel, P. A. A. treks to Downtown Y. M. C. A. and Westinghouse invades Y. M. H. A. for skirmishes that cannot affect the annexation of the Y. M. H. A.'s second consecutive premiership.

JIMMY SMITH PASSES UP AIR TRIP

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor.

Jimmy Smith is coming here by railroad for his 15-round bout with Teddy Yarosz for the state middleweight title at Motor Square Garden next Monday night.

Plans to have him return here from Philadelphia by airplane which is the way he came on with his stablemate, Danny Hassett, for the original date of the postponed match, were abandoned yesterday. Matchmaker Lew Raymond ordering the fighter to take no chances of having anything happen to further set back the show.

Raymond spent three of the most miserable hours of his life when Smith and his manager and Hassett and trainer, Billy Clark, were that long overdue at the local airport after having wired their time of arrival and then stopped to kill some time in Harrisburg, two weeks ago. He never was so glad to see anyone as he was the boxer's party when it finally appeared out of the clouds.

DUE TOMORROW NIGHT

The new arrangement means that Smith will finish his training at home this afternoon and leave Philadelphia tomorrow morning and arrive tomorrow night. Yarosz will wind up his work at Monaca this afternoon and will rest tomorrow except for a long walk. They will weigh in at the Motor Square gym at 3 p. m. Monday.

Odds on Yarosz to win have shortened considerably during the last few days, and he may be not more than a 5-to-4 favorite at ring time. The betting gents are taking into consideration the cold which caused him to ask for a postponement from the original date, Friday night of last week, and they had a chance to look over Smith in training in the Lyceum ring before the bout was set back and they like his punch. When the match was made the betting was as high as 10 to 3 on Yarosz to win.

SELLOUT ASSURED

Few reserved seats remain for the show, and there are only a handful of general admission tickets available, so that a sell-out of the Arena for the city's first legalized 15-round battle is assured, it was said today.

It was one year ago tonight that Ernie Schaaf, Boston heavyweight, received the head injuries in a bout with Primo Carnera which caused his death three days later in a New York hospital.

Webers	3	2	12	15	.600
Ravens	0	5	8	26	.000
Duquesne	0	0	0	0	.000
Tech	0	0	0	0	.000

The City Hockey League will go collegiate and local ice fans will witness the only doubleheader on the season's schedule at Duquesne Garden tonight.

Two groups of old campaigners, the league-leading J. Scott Morgans and the last-place Red Ravens, are to do battle in the first game, at 8 o'clock. Carnegie Tech and Duquesne, whose teams have been practicing diligently for many days, are to make their debuts in league competition in the climax engagement.

The Morgans, who have held their opponents to six goals in winning four out of five games, are virtually certain to take the measure of the hapless Ravens, whom they downed to the tune of 9-0 on the occasion of their last meeting, but even should they win, they are equally as certain to surrender the league lead.

To give the Tartans and Dukes an even chance to win the league title, a plan has been adopted whereby the teams will be rated on a percentage, rather than a points basis, and the team finishing with the best victory average is to be handed the prize. Therefore, even should the Morgans win their lone defeat will leave them trailing the winner of the Duquesne-Tech game, which will have a perfect percentage of 1.000.

The Dukes and Tartans appear to be evenly matched, and the outcome of the battle is regarded as a toss-up. Gerald Baker, varsity grid star, is to start at left defense for the Bluffites. The probable lineups:

MORGANS	POS.	RAVENS.
J. Scully	G	Bughman
Tyson	D	Chalfont
McSorley	D	Longnecker
R. Schooley	C	Gibson
R. Schooley	W	D. Thompson
Powell	W	McKinney

Morgan spares—Jeffries Dort, Battaglia, Coulter and Lovett.

DUQUESNE	POS.	CARNEGIE T.
Sullivan	G	Dubin
Baker	D	Lenox
Thompson	D	Hudson
Dorning	C	Bell
McGill	W	Allies
Sieffert	W	Jerge

R. Duquesne spares—Smith, Gaughan, Hall, Roche, Ward, McNally and Sproule.

Leon See's 'Inside Story' Of Carnera's Career

EDITORIAL FOREWORD

Having let Primo tell of his early days up to the time he met Journee and See, the author now settles a moot question of Primo's citizenship before recounting Carnera's 1930 campaigns in Italy and Spain . . .

CHAPTER XXIII

By LEON SEE

Developer and Former Manager of Primo Carnera, World Heavyweight Boxing Champion

Is Primo Carnera Italian or French? The question has been raised often and a certain mystery seems to veil the question of nationality. It seems interesting to me to give some viewpoints:

During the few weeks between his departure from the wrestling booth of a little circus and his arrival in my training camp (in 1928), Carnera found a temporary job as carpenter with a contractor in Arcachon.

This contractor, who paid his foreign help much less than his French workers, was limited by law as to what percentage of salaried aliens he employed in ratio to the French workers.

Primo Carnera

The most simple way to bridge his difficulty was to have his alien employes naturalized and this he did for Primo. At the same time Carnera—who had lived in France for about eight years and who had not returned a single time to his native Italy—saw nothing wrong in becoming a naturalized Frenchman. When the boss asked him to sign the necessary application, the giant appended his heavy signature without hesitation.

FRENCH NATURALIZATION

In effect, not only did this naturalization not cost him a centime (his employer paid for it), but it relieved Carnera of the tiresome bother involving passports, permits for residence, and working papers.

Several days later I made the acquaintance of Primo as Arcachon and our most strange adventure began.

The giant did not give a thought to the application which he had signed (without really realizing what he was doing) when, several months later, the Official Journal of Ministerial Publications of France announced news which suddenly took on much importance: Primo Carnera was a naturalized Frenchman!

We were in London at the time; Primo had just encountered Jack Stanley there, I think, and already the uninterrupted series of his resounding and easy victories had filled Italy with rightful pride.

At heart—like the very great majority of expatriated Italians—Carnera had remained profoundly attached to his native country, and, while naturalization was of little moment when he was an obscure wrestler or a simple laborer, it took on a very serious significance when it threatened to deprive Italy of sports glory.

ITALIAN NATIONAL AGAIN

The future world champion did not hesitate for an instant. He begged me to make the necessary application to annul French naturalization. I went with him to the Italian Ambassador and Consul at London, and these diplomats promised to file immediately the necessary petition with the Minister of Foreign Affairs at Paris.

While it did not take many months for Primo to become a French citizen, the recovery of his Italian rights proved a long and vexatious task. But not on Italy's part. The Fascist nation was eager to welcome an athletic celebrity and it was very easy for us to obtain documents confirming Primo's claim from an Italian consulate. The French authorities were reluctant.

Thus this situation arose: In Italy Carnera was an Italian; in France he was a Frenchman.

And it was not long before the important question of military service was raised. In Italy that question was easy to solve. There exists, in effect, a law which says that when an Italian arrives at the age to serve under the colors and he is a resident in a foreign country—such was the case with Primo—he is authorized not to fulfill his military obligations until his definite return. In the meanwhile he is permitted to return to his native country on condition that these visits should not surpass three months.

FRENCH MILITARY CALL

In France, on the contrary, the situation was more grave. Primo received—we were at that time in America—a summons to report to the army recruiting bureau at Saint-Germain, where he had been a resident at the time of his boxing debut—a summons requiring him to do a year of military service, beginning October 1, 1930.

To wear the French uniform (after finding one his size) was to publicly recognize his naturalization.

To ignore the summons would be to default and it would be impossible to return to France—even to cross this country, for example, to visit England.

We had only a few weeks of respite; we had to find a solution.

That which presented itself to me was simple: To demand an examination before a physician appointed by the French Consul at New York, hoping for a certificate stating him "not fit for military duty."

The result justified my hopes. The medical report indicated that Carnera had flat feet, varicose veins and other defects which would or might prevent him from becoming a good soldier. That finding was sent to the military authorities and soon the French Consul was advised that the Frenchman, Primo Carnera, was definitely exempted.

PROUD OF NATIONALITY

It was an amazing paradox! A giant of exceptional strength, a fighter already of repute—a future world champion — officially considered unfit for duty as an ordinary soldier!

At any event, the problem was solved for us.

Is Carnera an Italian?

I do not hesitate to reply: Yes.

Primo is Italian from the bottom of his heart and no innocent signature on a document (which he did not fully understand) can keep him from a nationality of which he is naturally proud.

When anyone becomes a celebrity, a crowd of people claim the glory of having discovered him or her. Carnera is no exception to that rule. There is the good Monsieur Legros, who, as early as 1923 or '24, induced Primo to don boxing gloves for the first time with the result that he was massacred by an experienced opponent and made so disgusted that he swore he would never box again!

I know of many who sincerely believe that they discovered the present world champion . . . Let them have the pleasure of that conviction as long as it pleases their vanity.

In the United States, news has spread that Walter (Good Time Charley) Friedman discovered Carnera. But when the jovial assistant to Bill Duffy first saw Primo, the latter had been boxing for more than a year and was already a ring sensation in Europe. I have always considered Friedman an excellent fellow, who accompanied us on our first trip to America in 1930 and on several of our journeys in the United States. Certain newspapers published his photograph (and those of others) captioned "manager of Carnera," but I assure you that he never had a contract with Primo or me.

Only Bill Duffy had such a contract and that as our American representative. This, by the way, was signed after we reached New York in 1930. Friedman did write to Duffy recommending Carnera.

Though we often disagreed on training and fight tactics, Duffy was most useful and active in defense of our interests, sometimes in dangerous situations. . . .

HAILED BY RIPLEY

Before Friedman had ever seen the Italian giant, I had written to many American managers among my friends, suggesting that they handle our proposed tour of the United States. Gus Wilson, Charley Rose, and others will recall receiving such messages from me. But—they all passed up the opportunity, because experience dictated that giants—so-called super-heavyweights—are usually duds. They tossed my offers and photographs of Primo aside and who can blame them?

The Private Papers of a Reporter

This fantastic tale spellbound some of us as it was unfolded last night—but it is said to be a fact. It deals with a Chicago reporter, one of the aces of his day (about 30 years ago), who was fired by his editor because he came in a little blotto.

The discharged newspaperman staggered down the steps and his fellows heard him muttering this prayer: "Oh, just do me one favor, one favor, please! Send me to the biggest scoop that ever happened in this town—so I can give it to my paper's biggest rival! Oh, send me to the biggest scoop so I can drive my editor crazy!"

He went into a barroom where, between dozens of drinks, he kept cussing his editor and repeating his hysterical prayer for a scoop to give to the opposition press and thus drive his editor nuts. He became a bore and obnoxious—so they tossed him out into the gutter.

As he tried to lift his saturated-with-alcohol frame—a manhole near him opened and was pushed aside. Out came a knight in armor! Then came a faun. And then a fairy with a wand.

The dizzy reporter thought he had gone out of his mind. He got up and zigzagged until he got home—where he slept it off and remained for three days thinking he had the delirium tremens.

When he was able to read a newspaper he learned that the knight in armor, the faun and the fairy with the wand—who crawled out of the manhole—were the first survivors of the Iroquois Theater catastrophe in Chicago—where about 700 people died. They were members of the show in costume, who had discovered a hole and crawled through it—a sewer—which led them to the street and safety through the grime and filth.

He was the only reporter on the scene! With the biggest scoop in years! Which changed the fire laws drastically throughout the nation. And because he was so drunk—he missed it.

Edwin C. Hill, my noted colleague, was delivering his usual snappy air comments the other evening. He deservedly praised the Federal sleuths who had solved most of the major kidnaping problems. "There are only two," said Mr. Hill, "still unsolved—the Lindbergh and Bremer cases."

Relly? How about the O'Connell case of Albany?

This is the sort of anecdote that would be funnier, I know, if it appeared in a column conducted by a contemporary. But I haven't yet omitted a gag on myself when I heard it first. It happened the other night when Mrs. Winchell and her sister searched for a cab in front of the house. I had told her that a car was coming for me any moment and she could use it. A driver of a private limousine stopped and asked her if she wanted to hire his car. She took it, and on the way downtown recalled that I had sent for one. "Oh," oh'd the Countess, "were you waiting for Mr. Winchell?"

"No," was the reply, "I was waiting for a big shot."

J. M. Josefsberg reports that the Paramount lights this week read: "Milton Berle & Rubinoff and His Violin."

Well, adds the wag, if Berle, the idea pirate, is as good as he used to be the lights will soon read: "Milton Berle and Rubinoff's Violin!"

Poor English Approved

He was putting four-year-old Shirey Temple through a scene for the "Fox Follies" when the child reeled off an amazing number of double negatives. MacFadden cut the scene.

"That's bad English," he said.

"I know that," the child replied, "but you said last week I was to speak natural—like myself."

"Okay," said MacFadden, "you win."

"But, Mr. MacFadden," Shirley said, "you're not speaking good English. You said 'okay' and you told me never to say 'okay' 'cause it isn't a good word."

SYRIA MOSQUE

Program:
Toccata and Fugue, D Minor.....Bach-Ormandy
Piano Concerto No. 1.....Beethoven
Symphony "Pathetique".....Tschaikowsky

Those who travel the forbidding weather and came to Syria Mosque last night were repaid by the thrilling experience of hearing the wonder-child, Ruth Slenczynski, play piano with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. Eugene Ormandy conducted and won everyone's heart by his generous and charming attitude toward this amazing youngster.

Mr. Lissfelt

In the presence of this latest sensation in the musical world, the orchestra rather fell into second place. Children do memorize easily and can learn far more rapidly than adults. That is no news to teachers. But here is a child who not only learns her notes and cues well when she plays with orchestra, but who has the primitive force to lead.

Ruth Slenczynski leads by her masterful rhythm, her adult tone, by phrasing that is traditional and right, by a charm that, after due thought, I believe will follow her into her later years. She can command a brilliant tempo, she pedals with sense, in the cadenzas of her concerto there is imagination, indeed her shortcomings during this concerto were only those of childhood, and to mention them seems almost belittling.

Face to face with this performance, is one actually confronted with the inexplicable? There is a wise parent behind this musical wonder child of 8 years and a still wiser teacher. What we heard is made by them. But we cannot forget that this child is the sacred instrument which responds superbly to mighty music.

I wish we might have been spared the encores, a Bach Toccata, a Paganini Etude and the Weber Rondo Brilliant, for they were anti-climax after the thrill of the Beethoven Concerto.

The Minneapolis Orchestra has taken on a new life with Ormandy. Its former calm classic and thoughtful playing is no more, but there is youth in its music nowadays, and Ormandy has done that. Of Ormandy's personal readings of symphonies especially I cannot feel so happy.

If, with the Tschaikowsky "Pathetique," he had any plan, I failed to hear it, and the irresistible second movement came to me with utter lack of grace. A little obvious in his climaxes and a bit stagy altogether. His arrangement of the Bach "Toccata" seemed without orchestral balance. In fact, Bach is always better in the original.

Sunday afternoon the orchestra will play a program of Viennese dances, and it plays them with great charm. The pianist will repeat the Beethoven Concerto.

Comedy Film In Warner

By MARGARET RUSSELL

"Hips, Hips, Horray," Wheeler and Woolsey comedy in the Warner, is composed of a series of slap-stick situations carelessly thrown together. It gets off to a good start with the lovely Ruth Etting singing "Keep Romance Alive." Then it slows down through some "cutie" scenes of girls in bathtubs and celophane in an impossibly extravagant beauty shop, where Thelma Todd holds sway, alternately as a blonde and brunette.

Action picks up when Wheeler and Woolsey, medicine-men lipstick peddlers, decide to weld their uncertain fortunes to the lucious Todd's beauty establishment. Sheer nonsense in the prescribed W. and W. manner follows without rhyme or reason. Wheeler has an insatiable passion for bananas. Woolsey's cigars are as inevitable as taxes, and his habit of tying their celophane wrappers into knots keeps two detectives on his trail through most of the picture.

High moments result when a racing car with be-goggled Woolsey at the wheel, leaps from cliff to cliff, from snowy mountain to sandy desert, in a wild race, and the safety of the crazy pair hangs, not by the proverbial hair, but by a Wheeler hiccough. The usual array of pretty girls, music and dancing provide a background for the senseless Wheeler - Woolsey antics. It is suspected that Thelma Todd and Dorothy Lee justify the "Hips, Hips" part of the "Horray" title.

Pathe News shows shots of the riot in Paris. Gertrude Niesen, radio star, sings a bouncing ball song, "Keeps Rainin' All the Time." There is an E. M. Newman Musical Journey, "The Cannibal Isles," and an Andy Clyde short "funny," "The Super Snooper."

Fulton Holds 'Carolina' Until Thursday

"Carolina," romantic and dramatic picture in the Fulton, is proving so satisfactory to Fulton audiences that Manager Cool has decided to extend the engagement through Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Janet Gaynor and Lionel Barrymore are featured in the picture, and Robert Young plays the juvenile male lead.

'Eskimo' Film, Amos 'n' Andy In Penn

By MICHAEL SHAW

On the coldest day in 35 years, the Penn yesterday screened, appropriately enough, a picture called "Eskimo." It is an interesting and tragic film, doing for the people of the frozen North what Murnau's great "Tabu" did for the South Sea Islanders and what "Goona-Goona" did for the Balinese.

After its drama, there comes acceptable comic relief in the personal appearance of Amos 'n' Andy in a stage show which also includes several Pittsburgh radio acts.

"Eskimo" is directed by W. S. Van Dyke, of "Trader Horn" fame. It is based on Peter Freuchen's well-known book of the same name and employs a native cast, speaking the native language, and thus involving the use of many subtitles. The only professional actors are those representing the white men of the story, principally Canadian "mounties."

We live through the long winter and the short summer with a small Eskimo tribe. We see them building their igloos, hunting and fishing, trading with the whites, enjoying their rare festivals.

We learn of their hospitality, their truthfulness, their faithful keeping of promises. And we observe their social customs, spiced up a bit for movie purposes, perhaps, which have led to the billing of the film in some places under the title of "Eskimo Wife-Traders."

The hero is Mala, a great hunter worshipped by his people—and a surprisingly attractive man he is. Mala possesses a pretty wife, whom he willingly lends to friends bereaved of their own women, in accordance with custom. But when the white skipper of a trading vessel takes the wife against her will and against his sworn promise, Mala kills him with a harpoon.

Mala broods for a time over his lost wife, but eventually is comforted by two other women given him in turn by a friend. When a post of the Canadian Mounted is established in the region, Mala is brought to a white man's justice which he does not understand.

Betrayed by the "mounties" whom he has saved from death by freezing, he fights free of his handcuffs and mushes back to his village through a horrible winter. Eating his huskies one by one, battling off a wolf with his bare hands, he gains his objective only to find the "mounties"—admiring and friendly, but sternly obeying the call of duty—hot on his trail.

With the woman who loves him best, Mala seeks death in the spring breakup of the ice; and they are last seen on a drifting floe which grows gradually smaller.

Before the film ends we have seen Mala hunting the walrus, the polar bear and the "thundering herd" of caribou, and we have seen him whaling with the white men—all scenes of startling beauty and drama and well worth anyone's while.

Amos 'n' Andy appear in whiteface, doing a brief sketch as they do it over the radio, talking in all the varied voices of the characters they assume. Yesterday's audiences must have been made up largely of Amos 'n' Andy fans, and judging from the laughter and applause, it was a big treat to them.

Beverly West In Pitt

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

Since everyone else is imitating her famous sister, Mae, Beverly West seems to think she has a right to do the same, and does so, most convincingly on the Pitt stage. She talks like Mae, she walks like Mae and her clothes are quite decidedly West-ish, yet due to the influx of "Mae West" acts, her capable performance just doesn't bowl the folks over.

The person, though, who does get the audience responding on all fours is Funny-girl Mayberry, of the team of Stratford and Mayberry. She's a clever piece of nonsense who plays an outspoken I-had-to-walk home imp with amusing boldness. In contrast to her airiness is her poised blonde partner in fun, Miss Stratford, who, too, has to walk home, but from a limousine, not a truck ride.

Another comedian you'll like in "All Girl Revue" is tiny Dolly Kramer, who fairly bubbles personality in her minature hot-baby line. She delights in kidding good-looking Helen Compton, who by the way, directs a Forty-second street orchestra that knows how to play, and includes an excellent and really tuneful version of the "Last Round-Up."

Flo Mayo, as well as the five Flo Mayo Girls are artists on the trapeze. Babe LaVal, who believes in giving a laugh with every step of her eccentric dance arrangement. Lou and Irma Belmont go in for jazzed-up dancing, which you may, again may not, like.

On the screen the racketeers enter again into a tale of the thrills of underworld life with George Bancroft and Judith Anderson in the night-world roles, and Francis Dee as a spoiled daughter of the rich.

Play to Be Given At Union Services

Union Sunday evening services of churches of the Knoxville district will be held tomorrow at the First Methodist Protestant Church, Zara and Georgia avenues. In addition to prayers and a scripture reading, a play will be presented.

'I Sold Jean Harlow a Postage Stamp!'

(Note:—This alleged writer has again been reading the motion picture fan magazines. Inasmuch as there seems to be a great demand for articles from men who went to school with Greta Garbo and from women who fitted Mae West in her first corset, I think it is high time that I did a piece along similar lines. This, then, is the tragic story of Elmer Dunkelspiel, written as any good fan magazine would wish it.)

* * *

I AM about to Tell All. Perhaps I am making a mistake when I Tell All. Or perhaps I am not. Only time will tell. Right now, who knows? And, on the other hand, nobody knows.

Today I am a bum. Yes, I admit it. I am writing this article on a park bench. Tomorrow I may sink even lower. I may have to finish this on a curbstone. And after that—well, who knows?

'Twas not always thus. I was not always a bum. Believe me, dear reader, I was a respected citizen in Los Angeles, Cal. I had a wonderful wife and three little kiddies that loved me. And where are they now? Ah, who knows?

But I must begin at the beginning. At the age of 30 I was the owner of a drug store in a busy section of Los Angeles. Life had been very kind to me up until that point. I could make an excellent sandwich, and my salads were the talk of the neighborhood. Naturally, my drug store was very prosperous.

My wife and I were two happy people, I can tell you. We were ideally mated, and it looked as though we would go on through life having child after child. We had our car, our dog, our kiddies, our drug store, our in-laws, our—but I cannot go on. For it was at this point in my life that the Great Event happened.

My fingers tremble as I write about it. My brain is in a whirl as I attempt to describe my emotions. But I must control my emotions. For if I do not—well, who knows?

Little did I dream when I opened my drug store on the Great Morning that this was to be the biggest day of my life. There was no warning; no inkling of what was to be. The first three hours passed quietly enough, as I mixed my chop suey and buttered my rye bread in preparation for any luncheon business. I sold a cane, a book, several cans of sardines and two radios. Ah, yes, my friends, mine was a popular drug store.

Suddenly the door opened. Be still, my beating heart, be still! I looked up from my bottle of mayonnaise. And then—and then, I saw Her!

It was Jean Harlow! Beautiful, tender, lovable, adorable exotic, quixotic, anti-knock, free-wheeling, gorgeous Jean Harlow! Not her understudy. Not her stand-in. Not her stepfather. No, it was none of these. It was Jean Harlow herself!

I spoke first. I wasn't conscious of what I was saying, sweet reader. The words came automatically. It was as though I was in a dream that I wished would last forever.

"G-g-good morning," I said. "W-what can I do for you?"

And they can't take away my memories. Never. Never. Never. For, no matter what happens, I sold Jean Harlow a postage stamp! . . .

Glorious words! She didn't ask, lovely reader, for a 2-cent stamp. Ah, no. She was too wonderful for that.

Defense Talk On Screen

The vital importance of preparedness against war is stressed in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News by Secretary of War Dern and Acting Secretary of Navy Roosevelt in ushering in National Defense Week. Pictures show Army and Navy units in action with the Globe Trotter describing their work.

Rioting in the street of Paris show the gendarmes charging mobs of striking taxi drivers and Civil Service employes parading in protest against pay cuts. There are pictures of former President Doumergue, new leader of the government, who took the place of Premier Daladier.

Garbo to Give Footprint

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 10.—The plight of the reporters who have been playing hide-and-seek with Greta Garbo ever since to that of the gent from the Chinese Theater here, who must patter after the elusive Swede with a block of wet cement.

And a big block of cement it is, too, if you credit the old joke, for Sid Graumann, maestro of this unusual monument to the cinema industry, wants La Garbo to be the first star of 1934 to add her footprints to the collection of pedal extremities of famous folk now being perpetuated in the forecourt of the Chinese.

Most celebrities come willingly for this little ceremony. Garbo is only the second to have the cement taken to her.

Charles Lindbergh was the first, and a very funny episode it was. The colonel was approached and, with his customary horror of publicity, refused. Ingenious if impious press agents then conceived the idea of laying a block of cement before his hotel door. Unfortunately the plot was tipped and Lindbergh ducked out a side door.

Curious, the fact that both Joe E. Brown and George Raft are making pictures that carry them back to their old professions. In "Sawdust," Brown plays a circus acrobat, and in Mae West's "It Ain't No Sin," Raft dons gloves to impersonate a prize-fighter.

More Dramas Than Ever Before

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Drama Week, which was celebrated in New York by 42 performances given free in schools and hospitals by actors working for the CWA, brought about a dozen little theater productions to Pittsburgh. Most notable was "The Dybbuk" out at the Y Playhouse. Walter Winchell offers the suggestion that the big film companies should make a picture of "The Dybbuk." The amendment is here offered to have our Pittsburgh film companies beat Hollywood to it—if copyright laws permit.

Mr. Seibel

Nearly all the little theaters won laurels by very good performances. Surprisingly fine work was done by the St. Lawrence Players in "Broken Dishes" Thursday at Peabody High School. Direction by Peggy Dougherty and Norman Porter had brought professional ease to the cast, in which John Larkin distinguished himself by eccentric comedy, while Clyde Schaffer sang sentimental songs to huge applause.

Ambitious plans are also afoot for the coming week. "Richelieu" will be presented by the Newman Players Sunday and Monday in the Cathedral High School under direction of Madeleine Skell Foust. The Masquers of Calvary Parish will put on "Here Today" directed by Charles Wooldridge Jr., Monday and Tuesday. The Kingsley Players book "Smilin' Through" for Tuesday in Larimer School. The Resurrection Players of the South Hills stage "The Alarm Clock" by Avery Hopwood Tuesday in Brookline School. A the Pitt Players, directed by Carl Cass, will produce Martin Flavin's "Children of the Moon" in the Hotel Schenley Theater next Thursday.

The Passion Play by a Negro cast of 300, Tuesday evening in Schenley High School, will be something out of the ordinary. We have at least four dozen dramatic organizations in Pittsburgh so there's plenty of good acting talent.

Meanwhile the Y Playhouse is already rehearsing its next bill—Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew" in modern dress. The South Hills Community Theater is at work on "Berkeley Square," to be played in Washington School early in March. The Epworthian Players have cast John J. Davis in the role of the stranger for "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," in April. And the Dracomtir Players will have William H. Bergheimer, Jr., play the title role in "The Devil," by Molnar, March 1 and 2.

Drama lovers can see a new play almost any evening if they will strike the trail of the Little Theaters.

Miss Francis On Stanley Screen

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Mandalay," dramatic photoplay in the Stanley, has a cast headed by Kay Francis, Ricardo Cortez and Lyle Talbot, each equally prominent. They do the best that it is possible for them to accomplish with an unpleasant story that has no particular appeal that the shorter subjects on the program cannot make you forget.

Miss Francis finds herself deserted in a Rangoon palace of pleasure, because her sweetie, Ricardo Cortez, seems to be under some sort of obligation to Warner Oland, owner of the establishment, who covets the gal as a replacement for his passe hostess. When she gets money enough, you bear "the paddles chunkin' from Rangoon to Mandalay," but without the familiar tune, as she goes away. Aboard ship she meets Talbot, doctor bound for a fever district, and falls in love with him.

Then up pops Cortez, who just about wins her again despite his dirty trick. He learns the police are after him. When the officers arrive, his room is vacant, the window is open and there is a glass with dregs of poison. The verdict is suicide, so the officers leave the ship and the paddles chunk on toward Mandalay. But Ric has fooled 'em, and turns up again. So Kay just ups and sizzes him, herself, and the heel, accommodating at last, jumps out of the window to die in the river as he was supposed to have done.

An amusing Betty Boop, cartoon, a news real including talk by Emma Goldman, and other short features will be found enjoyable.

HEAVIER STEEL OPERATIONS FORECAST

By B. E. V. LUTY

Demand for steel has increased more in the last fortnight than seemed likely from the viewpoint of three weeks ago. The official forecast of ingot production this week was 37.5 per cent of capacity against 34.4 per cent for last week and an average of 31.7 per cent for the first four weeks of the year, but it appears that production was stepped up during the week, beyond original schedules, and a 40 per cent rate either has been attained or will be attained next week.

The report of actual production in January made the same showing as that for December in that production exceeded the average of the weekly figure. January production being at 34.13 per cent while the average of the weekly figures was 32 per cent. Apparently a corresponding adjustment is fully in order now.

Attainment of a 50 per cent rate is now seen for the nearby future, with a close approach to 60 per cent before the summer lull, assuming that there will be one according to the almost universal precedent broken so strikingly last year.

At present shipments of steel to the automobile industry are fairly heavy but scarcely two-thirds of what they will be at the seasonal peak.

AUTO PRODUCTION UP

Production of cars and trucks, United States and Canada, in January, is estimated by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, which does not make estimates unless it has fairly close figures, at 155,000. Production is now at a higher rate and despite the fact that some stocks of steel are left there has been heavy buying in anticipation of still heavier operations as well as of advances in sheet and strip prices, generally predicted in the last few weeks as likely to become effective by the end of February.

The present steel producing rate has been reached with virtually no assistance by the railroads, as while there have been some orders little steel is actually being rolled at present. The automobile industry has helped materially and there has been a mild increase in demand over a wide front, partly seasonal but chiefly general in character, as indicated by the fact that in various products improvements began about December 1 instead of at the turn of the year.

DEMAND EXPANDING

Further increase in general requirements are to be expected, seasonal and otherwise. Apart from increase in requirements is increase in demand upon mills by absorption of stocks various buyers now have, particularly in tin plate and cans, but involving also wire products and merchant bars. There was stocking of these products as last year closed on account of the expiration of old contracts at prices lower than those ruling lately.

It has become a simple matter to count up sufficient items to indicate a 50 per cent operating rate for the near future, with some increase beyond that figure. With a 50 per cent operation production of ingots would be at 34,000,000 tons a year, within 13 per cent of the combined output of 1931 and 1932 or within 7 per cent of the combined output of 1932 and 1933, and 62 per cent of the record tonnage, made in 1929.

It is estimated that the 12,775 freight cars and 159 passenger cars just bought by the Van Sweringen roads, Chesapeake and Ohio, Nickel Plate and Erie, will involve close to 175,000 net tons of steel. This tonnage alone would represent engagement of about one per cent of total steel making capacity for four months, and thus with other railroad buying several per cent will easily be added to the steel producing rate.

TIN PLATE EXPORTS RISE

Exports of tin plate in December amounted to 18,851 tons, the heaviest since September, 1930, exports reaching substantial proportions only late last year, the monthly average in 1932 having been only 3,200 tons. As mills were crowded with domestic business in December it is inferred that exports have been running heavier since the first of the year.

Heavy melting steel scrap on the Pennsylvania Railroad list on which bids closed last Wednesday morning, brought slightly over $14.25 while the rails brought between $14 and $14.25. No material change occurred from the preceding list, which had represented a large advance over the previous market. Pennsylvania Railroad scrap is premium material and the going market quotation of $13.50 is not altered, but it is fully expected that the next sales of any size will be at an advance.

Farm Price Level Higher for Week

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Due to price increases for several commodities including wheat, meat animals, potatoes and tobacco, the general price level of farm products was reported today by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics as up 2 points during the week ending January 24.

In percent of the 1910-14 average, of 100, the index of prices was 71 compared with 51 in January, 1933. Prices paid by farmers remained unchanged at 116 per cent of the pre-war average. The index of purchasing power of farm products at 61 was 22 per cent higher than in January, 1933.

EARLY LOSSES IN STOCKS REDUCED

PRICES STEADY ON LOCAL BOARD

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Stocks rallied following heavy initial selling today that sent shares 1 to around 3 points lower. General losses were reduced about half and some of the metals and untilities entirely erased early declines. Aircraft shares were in heavy supply at the opening, but also recovered substantially.

Aviation Corporation lost nearly 4 points on the first transfer of 20,000 shares but soon halved this loss. Douglas Aircraft acted in a similar manner while United Aircraft sagged nearly 4 points on a belated start.

United States Smelting converted a 2-point drop into a 4-point gain. Other shares reducing recessions of 1 to more than 2 points included United States Steel, Chrysler, New York Central, Sante Fe, Case, Johns-Manville, American Telephone and United States Industrial Alcohol.

Overnight consideration of the administration's first step toward the control of speculation found brokerage opinion mixed as to probably effects.

Some brokers asserted that, if the Fletcher measure becomes a law as it is now written, commission house business would be greatly reduced and many firms probably would have to retire. It was also argued that there will be grave danger that the essential functions of the capital market will be seriously interrupted by the application of too radical restrictions on trading.

On the other hand, however, some bankers and brokers took an optomistic view of the situation. These pointed out that the public, which has never quite recovered from its 1929 beating, may once more take an interest in securities when it has realized that the markets are under supervision of the government and that manipulation and "whip-sawing" by the so-called pools will not be permitted.

Wall street, as a whole, was emphatically antagonistic to some of the provisions of the proposed law and in some offices the belief was expressed that the measure in its present form is unconstitutional.

One ray of hope in the brokerage firmament was that, as the President had not actually approved the bill as introduced in Congress, some of its features may be removed after the committee hearings which start next week. But the concensus was that some sort of a law will be speedily enacted.

The financial district was somewhat surprised by the declaration of a 25-cent dividend by the Chrysler Corporation in face of 50-cent disbursements in the two previous quarters. The company reported earnings for 1933 of $12,129,119, equal to $2.78 a share, compared with a deficit in 1932 of $11,254,232.

Foreign exchanges displayed firmness in early dealings. Sterling advanced 1⅛ cents to $5.03⅛ and the French franc gained .05 of a cent at 6.49 cents.

FEW NEW CWA WORKERS TO BE HIRED

More than 130,000 unemployed in Allegheny County who applied for CWA jobs are doomed to disappointment, according to Ralph W. Gibbs, director of the State-Federal Employment Bureau.

Following the Senate's passing of the $950,000,000 relief measure which is to finance CWA activities throughout the country, Gibbs said appropriations will be used primarily to keep at work those who are already on the payroll.

A Federal ruling, he declared, requires that first preference be given to employes on projects previously started or completed. According to a government pamphlet, the purpose of the regulation is "to provide continuous work after initial employment."

PREFERRED LIST KEPT

Explaining the preference, Gibbs said:

"It is illogical to expect to change the relief situation by giving a man a job for two or three weeks and then throwing him back into the ranks of the unemployed.

"We aim to put men on the payroll and keep them there as long as possible. CWA workers who have lost their jobs through completion of their projects are now on a preferred list from which future labor assignments will be made immediately on the lifting of the ban on further employment."

At CWA headquarters, Phillip H. Lantz, assistant administrator, said about 45 jobs have been finished in the county. Most of these, he asserted, are minor ones and have not caused an appreciable lowering of the payroll total.

APPLICATIONS DROP

Voicing the opinion that most of his duties in connection with the CWA are at an end, the bureau head said:

"After I hire a worker, I have no more connection with him. I believe that I shall do very little hiring as a result of the allotments soon to be made to the county, since most of the new projects will be starting as the old ones are completed, and the labor will merely be transferred."

Transfers, he explained, will be made from the office of James L. Stuart, county administrator. New men, Gibbs said, will be hired only in districts where no CWA work has been done or where no former CWA employes are available.

Headquarters yesterday announced dismissal of John C. Onufer, truck driver, for transporting fellow workers. This followed an accident in which Joseph Rupert, of Forest Hills, suffered a broken leg as he slipped from the side of a truck.

Officials said dismissal will result in every case where an employe is found violating a safety rule.

BANK TO OPEN IN M'KEESPORT

The Union National Bank at McKeesport has received word from the Comptroller of Currency that it may operate on an unrestricted basis. The bank, closed since March 4, has permission to release immediately 70 per cent of its deposits, amounting to $1,261,510.25. Depositors agreed not to withdraw the remaining 30 per cent.

Robert M. Baldridge, president of the bank, announced the institution has been accepted as a member of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The Turtle Creek Bank and Trust Company, of Turtle Creek, today was opening for business as the successor of the Turtle Creek Savings and Trust Company. The latter institution has been operating on a restricted basis.

Announcement of the reorganization and opening was made last night by the State Banking Department. The new institution has a capital of $200,000; surplus of $100,000; reserves of $25,830, and deposits totaling approximately $1,100,000. A. L. Faller, is chairman of the board, W. H. Semmens, Jr., president and A. Marshall Thompson, first vice-president.

'I Am Ready' Topic Of Dr. Macartney

"I Am Ready . . . Without Me Nothing" is the subject of the Rev. Dr. Clarence E. Macartney's sermon for the 10:45 o'clock service at the First Presbyterian Church, Sixth avenue, tomorrow morning. Celebration of the Lord's Supper will also be held at the service.

In the evening at 8 o'clock Dr. Macartney will give the fifth in his "Five Sermons From Life." "When Life Caves In." He will center his talk on the quotation "Life, So Cruel, So Great a Sham."

Devil's Island Convicts Ruled By Murder Gangs

Death By Knife Fate Of Prisoners Who Resist

By GORDON SINCLAIR

CHAPTER X.

ST. LAURENT DE MARONI, French Guiana—You've heard of the Mafia and the Black Hand, those pre-Mussolini bandit gangs which terrorized South Italy.

Gangland with its own executioner. Gangland which holds barrack-room trials inside prison walls and dishes out the death sentence with gruesome regularity.

In five years or less the mosquitoes will get you.

An examining board came back. Two trusties chucked the corpses into the big hinged coffin. Someone demanded:

"Why they killed each other."

"They did, eh? And what were you doing?"

"Who, me?"

"Yes, you."

"Why I was sleeping, sergeant. Sound asleep."

"Asleep, eh—then how do you know they killed each other? Come on, slip these on. We'll take you for a little walk."

He clapped ankle bangles on the man who had spoken.

An Accuser

"Sergeant, it wasn't him."

"It wasn't, eh? Well, you seem to know a lot. Who was it? . . . No, no, never mind. Tell the warden."

The guard was trying to save the young fellow now, but it was too late.

The convict pointing an accusing finger, said:

"It was him. They all told him to go ahead and kill him. And he killed them both."

The guard looked dismayed. A dozen men sucked in breath as if they had hit their thumbs with a hammer. That boy had just written his death warrant. Then, to make it worse, another young fellow got up:

"Yes, sergeant; it was him. That guy in the black shirt. I seen him."

The guard was astonished and sorry. He hadn't expected to learn the name of the killer. He didn't care much. Now he said:

"Well, come on you two. Come out. We'll parade you."

The two informers were taken to the warden. It amounted to a return from the grave. They could not have lived another hour in that cage filled with human beasts. But the warden was man-wise. He instantly shipped the two lads to Cayenne.

Death to the 'Squealer'

"Squealers; two squealers. Get them."

Authorities were now fighting a hidden battle to save these two boys. They broke up one plot to slaughter them in Cayenne and transferred them to the lighthouse. I'll tell you about the lighthouse another time. It takes three men to run the light. They stay out on a rock six months.

But these two didn't stay that long. The third man, picked from a jungle road gang, knifed one of the squealers, and was himself knifed by the survivor. All three were found in a state of collapse one night when the light worked badly. All three recovered in the hospital.

The two informers were shipped back to France and tucked away in separate penitentiaries. But even yet it is not sure if they will live; for the Devil's Island telegraph spreads mercilessly around the world.

The law is death to the squealer

Lumber Dealers Of District Elect

Election and installation of officers brought to a close the twenty-seventh annual convention of the Retail Lumber Dealers' Association of Western Pennsylvania, in Webster Hall late yesterday. Officers named were:

President, D. E. Olson, of Titusville; vice presidents, H. C. Walker, Windber, and W. F. Campbell, New Wilmington; secretary, R. F. McCrea, Pittsburgh; treasurer, G. P. Textor, Wilkinsburg, and general counsel, Carl Van der Voort, of Ingomar.

Last Convict Ship

St. Laurent is the terminal for the last convict ship in the world. The Martiniere rounds up her cargo of human derelicts in Saigon, Indo-China, in Algiers, in Casablanca, and lastly in Rochelle, France.

Six to seven hundred at a time they are herded into two great holds in the grimy old ship; white men at one end, mixed breeds and colors at the other.

There is practically no discipline and certainly no duties aboard. Men may smoke, drink, sing, gamble and generally raise Cain if they feel that way. If they start tearing up the ship streams of live steam can quiet them.

Murders aboard are by no means uncommon. Hatreds spring up. Unprintable debaucheries take place and a few lasting friendships are formed.

Here, at St. Laurent, the new arrivals are shunted around from camp to camp, according to the degree of their ferocity. Only the meekest and tamest go to Cayenne; the worst of all go to the islands.

Jungle hems the steamy little town in as effectively as barbed wire. It is so thick that, as you steam up the Maroni, branches are entwined together overhead. Parrots screech and monkeys yelp from the trees.

A Dutch passenger aboard on the day I went up lost his dog when the over-fat dachshund tumbled into the soupy stream and was instantly spiked and bitten to pieces by tiny fighting fish which infest the water. The Dutchman, a roly-poly planter, wept hysterically for an hour.

Asleep on hand-made wheelbarrows lay 50 or 60 burned out "liberes" waiting for death or a job. They didn't seem to care which came their way.

Iron-Circled Town

Around the town was a circle of iron and steel dormitories housing a thousand bad men. There were 40 to 60 in a room; killers, bandits, pickpockets, perverts, bomb-tossers. One was a doctor whose idea of a good time had been to cut women patients into steaks and chops.

By day these men make a pretense at work. They crack stones, clear trees, repair the wharves, and do other laborers' jobs, but no attempt is made at teaching them a trade. There is no library, dining-hall, chapel or shop here, but the guillotine is kept freshly greased for action.

As I looked them over the words of Gov. Lemay rang in my ears:

"We don't aim to reform convicts. They are beyond reformation when they get here. France punishes; she does not mollycoddle."

From 6 at night until 6 in the morning these men are locked in their cages. There is no privacy. No man has a cell to himself. No man can avoid his enemies. No guards stalk the ramparts. There is no protection for the weakling. He gives all he's got and likes it—or else!

Or else what?

Seldom a month goes by without the guards on morning rounds find a corpse spiked to the floor with a great clasp knife between his ribs.

They drag the victim out and mark him off the lists. They question the survivors. But the law of gangland rules. No squealers. Death to the squealer. Only two cases are on recent record of fellow convicts naming the executioner.

Gangland at Work

That was on transfer day when new arrivals filled part of a dormitory; bad men in from jungle chain gangs filled the other half. The tough eggs, first of all, seized most of the new arrivals' food. There were fights over that, but nothing more serious than broken teeth and black eyes.

Then other things were demanded. Money first. The bad men knew that new arrivals would have already learned the knack of secreting money. There were fights over this, too. New convicts were amazed and horrified to discover themselves in cells with armed killers. Yet every man is searched before they lock him up. They came across with the money.

"All out. Step along, men . . . . No! Back to your places."

The guards, pistols drawn, moved the corpses with their feet then clanged heavy steel doors and went to report. The living convicts were silent, indifferent. This was old stuff to some of them. And, after all, life is cheap here. Cheap and meaningless in hopeless drudg-

NO. 31.

AN ORDINANCE—Regulating the deposit of moneys of the City of Pittsburgh; designating how depositories of said moneys shall be selected, and providing for the payment of interest thereon.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That any incorporated bank and/or trust company now or hereafter located and doing business in the City of Pittsburgh, having a capital and surplus of at least one million dollars ($1,000,000.00), may become an active depository; and any incorporated bank and/or trust company now or hereafter located and doing business in the City of Pittsburgh may become an inactive depository by complying with the conditions hereinafter set forth.

SECTION 2. (a) To secure the safety of the moneys of the City of Pittsburgh so deposited, each of said banks and/or trust companies designated as a depository shall deliver bonds to the Treasurer of the City of Pittsburgh for which he shall give his receipt, and the said Treasurer shall deposit all of said bonds in a safe deposit box or boxes located in the vault of the respective depository. If said depository shall not possess an adequate vault for safe deposit boxes in its place of business, the bonds to be deposited by it as security aforesaid shall be placed in a safe deposit box or boxes in a vault in a bank, trust company, or safe deposit company selected by the City Treasurer and the cost thereof shall be paid by the depository. The key or keys for access to said box or boxes shall at all times be deposited with the City Treasurer and no access to said box or boxes shall be had by said City Treasurer or City Controller or their duly authorized representatives or by the depository or its duly authorized representatives, unless the City Treasurer or the City Controller or their representatives and the representatives of the depository are both present.

The City Treasurer and the City Controller shall have the right to refuse to accept any corporate bonds as security when in their judgment the same are not in a class acceptable as security for city funds, and shall have the further right at any time to call for additional or other security to replace those deposited.

(b) The obligations that shall be acceptable security for the deposit of city moneys shall be of the following classes:

1. Bonds of the United States of America; Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; County of Allegheny, Pennsylvania; City of Pittsburgh; School District of the City of Pittsburgh and Certificates of Indebtedness issued by the City of Pittsburgh, including contractor's certificates which shall be taken at their market value.

2. Bonds of any other political subdivision of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, which shall be taken at ninety per cent (90%) of their market value.

3. Corporate bonds, which shall be taken at seventy-five per cent (75%) of their market value.

The value of said bonds so deposited and computed as aforesaid shall in their aggregate amount to the sum of the deposit of the City of Pittsburgh in the respective bank and/or trust company.

SECTION 3. From the duly qualified banks and/or trust companies shall be selected the depositories. In three of them active accounts shall be kept as well as inactive accounts, and the City Treasurer shall be and is hereby authorized and directed to deposit in each active depository moneys not to exceed One Million Dollars ($1,000,000.00), or as near that amount as practicable, unless the funds of the City on deposit are below Three Million Dollars ($3,000,000.00.) The aforesaid sum of Three Million Dollars ($3,000,000.00) on deposit with the active depositories shall be deducted from the total funds of the City on deposit, and the balance shall be distributed among all of the qualified depositories, including the said active depositories, as inactive accounts; provided, that no depository shall have an inactive account in excess of twenty-five per centum (25%) of its capital and surplus as shown by the statement filed by it with the City Treasurer, as provided in Section 7 hereof. The business of the city insofar as the active depositories are concerned shall be divided among them as nearly equally as possible. The depositories shall be selected by the City Treasurer and the City Controller.

SECTION 4. No depository shall at any time have on deposit moneys of the city in excess of the amount of the securities valued as above provided, held by the City Treasurer. The inactive accounts deposited therein shall only be withdrawn on not less than (30) days' notice in writing to the depository, which shall pay to the city the interest at the rate of one and one-half per centum (1½%) per annum, computed monthly, and payable on the fifth day of each month to the City Treasurer for the immediately preceding month.

SECTION 5. Should any depository fail or be prohibited in whole or in part, from doing business, it shall be the duty of the City Treasurer forthwith to report the same to the City Controller, who shall at once proceed to collect the balance due the City from said depository from the securities which have been deposited for said city funds by said depository, according to law.

SECTION 6. The City Treasurer shall notify, in writing, the City Council of the names of the banks and/or trust companies which shall become depositories under the provisions of this ordinance. The City Treasurer shall on the fifth business day of each month report to the City Controller in detail the amount of money on deposit with each depository and the bonds deposited to secure the same and their market value. The City Controller shall have the right when he deems it advisable to examine all the bonds or other collateral of the City of Pittsburgh, or any part thereof, thus deposited under the conditions provided in the second Section hereof.

SECTION 7. The City Treasurer shall, on or before the first of December of each year notify every bank and/or trust company in the City of Pittsburgh, qualified as a depository, of the terms of this ordinance and request that the said bank and/or trust company notify the City Treasurer on or before the fifteenth day of December of each year, whether or not it desires to become a depository of city funds, and any bank and/or trust company desiring to become a depository of such funds shall file a sworn statement with the City Treasurer of its financial condition, showing the amount of paid in capital and surplus and its general financial condition, and shall also furnish with said statement a copy of the last preceding statement furnished to the Comptroller of Currency or the Secretary of Banking as the case may be. The plan herein provided for city depositories shall become effective February 1, 1934, or as soon thereafter as practicable.

Any bank and/or trust company accepting an award of money as a depository hereunder shall enter into an agreement under its seal with the City of Pittsburgh to accept all the conditions and provisions of this ordinance, and that it contracts and agrees to accept all moneys tendered to it by the City Treasurer up to the amount of its award, and to pay the interest, if any, thereon in accordance with this ordinance, and to comply with all the provisions and conditions of this ordinance, and to safely keep and pay over all such moneys deposited with it. By accepting the award and executing the agreement aforesaid, said bank and/or trust company shall be held to agree to these provisions for itself, its successors and assigns.

SECTION 8. Any bank and/or trust company that at the time of the passage and approval of this ordinance is an inactive city depository and does not enter into a contract to continue as such inactive depository may retain moneys on deposit with it on February 1, 1934, for a period not to exceed six (6) months, on condition, however, that it has secured said deposit as provided in this ordinance, and the moneys on deposit with it shall be withdrawn in installments during the year 1934, as follows:

During the month of February, 1934, twenty per centum (20%) thereof; during the month of March, 1934, twenty per centum (20%) thereof, and during each of the months of April, May June and July, 1934, fifteen per centum (15%) thereof.

SECTION 9. As the Collector of Delinquent Taxes has in his possession at various times large sums of money, being the property of the City of Pittsburgh, it is the intent and meaning of this ordinance that it shall apply to all moneys of the City of Pittsburgh that are or may be in the custody of the Collector of Delinquent Taxes and they shall be deposited under the provisions of this ordinance, and wherever the term "City Treasurer" is used in this ordinance it shall be deemed to mean Collector of Delinquent Taxes also.

SECTION 10. That any ordinance or part of ordinance conflicting with the provisions of this ordinance, be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this ordinance, and particularly Ordinance No. 652, entitled, "An ordinance designating depositories for the moneys of the City of Pittsburgh, to regulate deposits therein, and to provide for the payment of interest thereon," approved the fifth day of December, 1930, and the various amendments thereto.

Passed in Council February 5, 1934.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Judson's concern was real. The perspiration was thick on his forehead and he looked haggard and anxious.

"Then you don't know who killed Mac?"

"You know as much about it as I do or as any of the rest of us, for that matter."

"What happened in the house?" I asked weakly.

"We can only guess. Somebody had been up in Mrs. Paige's boudoir. The door had been opened, apparently with a skeleton key and a little cedar chest on her table broken open. Its contents were all over the floor. But Anderson, who had examined it already, says that nothing seems to be missing. And they can't get a single new finger print.

"We think that MacNalley must have heard whoever it was working up there and started up the steps. The intruder heard him coming and shot at him from the top of the stairs. Mac seems to have fallen backward over the bannister into the hall below where we found him.

"The man ran down the steps to make his escape and met Carroll coming from the door of the library. He hit him with the butt of his rod, and locked the library door—which gave him time to get away—God, he must have had nerve!"

"Then Carroll saw whoever it was . . ."

"No, that's the worst of it. He says the light was out in the hall and as he stepped out something hit him. That's all he knows about it."

Wants 'Truth Serum'

"What did the man want upstairs?" I asked at length.

Judson shook his head with conviction. "You wouldn't run into a trick like that in the course of two or three average lifetimes, Kay. The underworld is bad and daring, but it isn't intelligent."

I lay still for a while in silence, wondering what on earth was responsible for Judson sitting at my bedside. As if in reply to my thoughts, he unconsciously gave me the answer.

"There's something else, too," he said. "I want you to know it right away. Tim Stokes is yelling for the 'truth serum.' Got an interview with the Commissioner and says he'll go to the Governor if we don't give it to him. Says he has enough money in the bank to pay for it."

"Scopolamin?" I asked in astonishment, propping myself up on one elbow.

Doctor Summoned

"Where'd he ever get that idea?" I asked incredulously.

"Seems like some friend of his out in Seattle was convicted of murder. They gave somebody or other the truth serum and Tim's friend got off. Tim swears he's innocent, and the upshot of it is that they've arranged for a doctor to come down from Philadelphia this afternoon and give it. I think your paper is engineering it. . . ."

"Oh, yes, the paper!" I exclaimed, remembering for the first time that there was such a thing as a newspaper. "Did they get last night's story?"

"Did they?" said Judson boastfully. "Why, Kay, they had the entire homicide squad out there and the bomb division, and the emergency crew, three ambulances and the fire department. And about a million people and automobiles!"

"How'd they know . . ."

"Well, the emergency squad came out there with the sirens going full blast. Somebody thought there was a fire and telephoned for the Towson engines. Too bad," he added thoughtfully. "That garden might have told us a lot, but today there isn't so much as the trace of a single flower bed left. Wonder the crowd left the trees standing!"

"The paper got the story all right?"

"Sure they did. I gave it to them myself. Some story, too!"

He thrust his thumbs into his vest pocket and leaned back in his chair with pride. "I gave 'em a good yarn, too. Just the kind they like. Not much truth in it but it makes dandy reading. Like to see a copy?"

Only Experienced Man

It was Reynolds, the managing editor, very excited and out-of-sorts.

"How's Kay?" he demanded. "Has he come to yet? What's the doctor say now?"

"At the phone," I answered promptly, hoping that my voice didn't sound as shaky as I felt.

"For God's sake, boy, I thought you were going to kick off. How are you? When did you come to?"

"Oh, yes, that part's all right. But say, Kay, we're in the devil of a mess down here. They're going to give Tim Stokes the truth serum this afternoon. We're back of it and there isn't a man on the staff who knows anything about it or who has ever seen it administered before except yourself. I don't suppose you could cover the story but do you think that you could read it over after it's written and make it read sensibly?"

"Who's going to write it?"

"Well, I think we'll have to phone up to the Philly paper and ask them to lend us one of their men. Somebody that knows something about it."

"I'm darned if you will," I shouted, my professional jealousy instantly aroused. "Don't you dare to bring anybody down here. They'll probably send you Phil Lester. He wrote it up in the Hemsley murder and he's rotten. Got it about three-quarters wrong. You count on me—I'll take charge of this!"

"But are you sure you're able?" insisted Reynolds. "We couldn't afford to have you fail us at the last minute. Are you out of bed yet?"

"Not yet, but I will be in a couple of minutes. If I'm able to drag a leg, I'll be there this afternoon. Where is it?"

Judson Skeptical

"Over at Headquarters at 2 o'clock. But be sure to call me if you feel wobbly or think that you can't make it."

"Okay."

"Now, Judson," I said, "I want a drink, a good stiff one. If you don't have it with you, go out and get it."

But Judson did have it, and as the hot brandy went racing through my body, I felt new life returning. Judson helped me into my clothes. My head ached painfully and throbbed and I was pretty weak.

"You hit the post on the staircase when you fainted," explained Judson. "Let me bathe it for you in this medicine that the doctor left."

"What do you think of the truth serum, Judson?" I asked as we proceeded with my toilet.

"Don't give it a cent's worth," replied the detective promptly. "That's what I came up here for—to see you and see if I couldn't persuade you and your paper to call it off. Talked myself black in the face with Anderson this morning. I hate it!"

"Why?" I asked in surprise. "You're so modern and progressive, Judson. I should have supposed you'd been for anything like this. Don't modern scientific methods appeal to you?" For I was remembering Judson's snappy suits and flashy ties and that ultra-futuristic yellow and orange roadster of his.

"I am progressive," complained Judson. "But juries ain't. When it's a question of a crook, you've got to use the old-time ways. I've seen too many good cases lost by this same twilight sleep business. There was the Meadows case, for instance. That fellow was guilty. We had him all sewed up going and comin'. He gets up in court and tells the jury about these here injections they gave him and how they knocked him out and how while he was unconscious he confessed to a lot of things he didn't know nothing about. Result was, jury disagreed. We never did get that baby, after that.

Suspicious of Stokes

"Now that's what Tim Stokes wants. Third degree—and truth serum. He'll get him a good lawyer and the jury will disagree or sumpin'. No, sir, it's not for yours truly, and I want you to ask that inspector friend of yours if he won't call it off."

Judson was in deadly earnest. His bantering manner had dropped away from him as one discards a coat, and his face was sad and doleful. Only too clearly he was foreseeing the end of a perfect case.

"There's something in what you say," I argued. "But if Stokes is actually guilty, he'll have to come across with the real story of the murder. That's the way the stuff works, as I understand it. You just can't lie. In that case, you'll have just so much additional evidence."

"Not necessarily," said Judson. "Tim's got plenty of sense. He probably has told this fake yarn so many times now that he'll tell it again even under an anaesthetic. That's what he's countin' on, of course. Say, Kay, does this stuff affect the subconscious mind—like mesmerism—do you happen to know? Could Tim tell anything that he hasn't already told?"

"The subconscious mind?" I repeated. "Yes, I believe that it affects both the conscious and the subconscious minds, though I'm not dead certain. I must ask the doctor about that point. The stuff sort of paralyzes all the senses except that of speech, you see. The reasoning faculties have all been put to sleep and the tongue just automatically answers any questions that are asked."

ARCHITECTURE THROUGH THE AGES—MAN'S MARCH AS A BUILDER

Architecture, the art and science of building was born from man's need of shelter and developed into a chief representant of civilization. It answered the material needs for protection, health and comfort. It created surroundings suitable for human activities. It satisfied his artistic taste, religious and social demands. Architecture was and is a true mirror of contemporary society. (Gen. Sc.)

DYING WORKMAN SOLVES CRIME

Dickens' "Hard Times" was written to influence reform of bad conditions in English factory towns. Mr. Gradgrind raises his children, Louisa and Tom, to consider cool facts only. Louisa married on her father's advice Bounderby, a wealthy banker; she helps spendthrift Tom. Handsome Harthouse wins Louisa's confidence, tries to induce her to elope. She flees to her father instead. Tom commits burglary, throws suspicion on Blackpool, a factory hand, whom Mr. Bounderby discharged for outspeaking workman's grievances. Blackpool is found dying in a pit; his story shows Tom's guilt, who escapes to America. (Eng. Lit.)

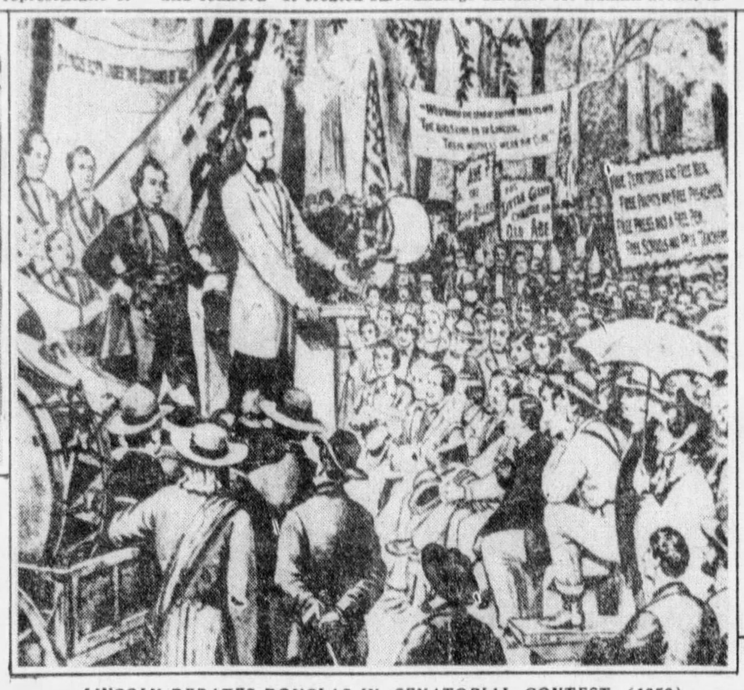
FOREST, KEYSTONE OF PROSPERITY

Forest, by its increase of moisture of soil and air, plays indirectly a great part in our food supply. Besides, it furnishes directly nuts, berries, maple sugar, game. Furs of its animals are valuable for clothing; its birds check insect pests; its wood is used in building, in machinery, ships, mines, railroads, etc.; for paper and textiles, dyes, chemicals, the bark of trees for tanning. It purifies air, water, offers recreation. (Forestry)



LINCOLN DEBATES DOUGLAS IN SENATORIAL CONTEST (1858)

During President Buchanan's administration the southerners were alarmed by the vigorous Republican campaign in 1858. The climax was reached in the senatorial contest of Illinois between Douglas, incumbent, the author of the Kansas-Nebraska Bill, and Abraham Lincoln, almost unknown lawyer of Springfield.

Lincoln boiled down the inconsistency of Douglas' doctrine "squatter sovereignty" represented in the Kansas-Nebraska Bill, to the question: "Has a territory more power than Congress that conferred the power?" Douglas could not answer "yes" (that would have repudiated the Dred Scott decision); nor "No" (this would repudiate his own doctrine). By clever evasion he won the senatorship.

CROMWELL (1599-1658) BESOUGHT BY DAUGHTER TO REFUSE CROWN

Oliver Cromwell, a great leader refused the English crown. After crushing the power of the autocratic Charles I, he quelled the rebellion in Ireland, royalistic disturbances in Scotland, defeated the Dutch on the sea. He dissolved the non-co-operating "Rump" parliament, summoned another which proclaimed him "Lord Protector" with supreme power. Soon after his death the Stuarts (Charles II, son of beheaded Charles I) were restored to the English throne, resulting in a royalistic reaction. Revengeful against the "king killers" they did not shrink from unearthing and hanging the moldering remains of Cromwell.

THE AUTONOMIC DIVISION OF HUMAN NERVOUS SYSTEM

The autonomic or sympathetic division of the nervous system consists of a double chain of ganglia ("knots" of nerve tissue) located ventral to spinal column, connected by nerves to other ganglia and plexuses (webs of nerves) scattered throughout the organs.

It is linked to the central division (brain, spinal cord) of the nervous system by part of the peripheral division (the vagus and spinal nerves); it controls the physiological functions (of which we are not conscious) involving muscular movements, glandular secretions of the circulatory, digestive, excretory, respiratory and endocrine organs (the chemical coordinators) of the body.

The rhythmical heart beat is brought about by alternation of accelerating impulses (+) from ganglia of autonomic division, and inhibitory impulses (-) coming along the vagus. Diameters of the bloodvessels (vasomotor control) and blood supply are similarly regulated. (General Science)

We Will Do All Right From Now On

Everybody is more or less that way about money. But why figure out the world's supply of gold at 550,000,000 ounces? Give us the answer in tons. And let it go at that.

When it comes to gold we are strictly a ton man. Then there are 8,800,000,000 ounces of silver left in the world for disguising tin spoons and crossing the Gypsy's palm.

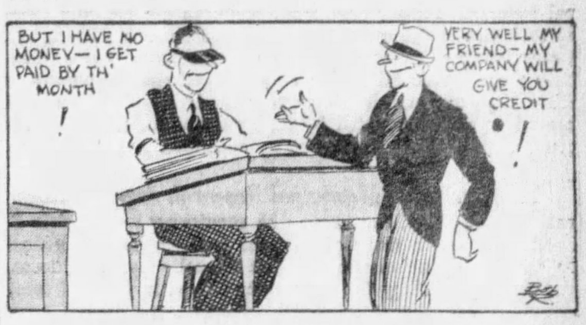
Those financial wizards are so tough they are even getting stingy with their arithmetic. They tell us we have a floating obligation of five billions in paper money. They will soon be weighing three-cent stamps. If they have that much paper money why not stack it up and give everybody a bale hook?

All any of us know about money is that it buys something we want if we have got it. If we ain't got it we go out and scramble for it.



Nobody worried about anything until the experts salted the thing down with statistics. Nine men out of every 10 are bankrupt Monday morning and solvent the near Saturday night.

But they never go into 52 receiverships a year. They plug along because they're used to it.

He is investigated, summonsed and cross-examined. In desperation he tries to end it all by leaping off the storm deck of an English tea table. He can take it from everybody except himself. If you want to know what it is to be busted flatter than a fumbled Christmas tree ornament just ask The Bug.

If you don't trust The Bug, which is plausible, ask anybody you know. The average career is a series of skids from one filling station to another. If you got paid by the month instead of the week you established lines of credit and the grocer loved you in December as he did in May.

That's how your ancestors did it. That's how your grandchildren will do it. And we were going great until Prof. Garbeluumm started in to explain it.

Vote Fraud Convictions

There Are Good Arguments for Appointing Election Officers—Comment On Local News.

*Five members of the election board of the Six*teenth District of the Fourth Ward have been found guilty in Federal Court of conspiracy to falsify ballots cast at the general election in November, 1932. This is the seventh election board convicted of fraud in that election. The disgraceful record raises the question if it would not be well to change our system of choosing election officials.

*According to the Philadelphia Bureau of Munici*pal Research, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh are the only cities of their size in the country with elected election officers, and Pennsylvania cities practically the only cities of any size which have them. Rhode Island has some elected election officers in fairly large communities, but either the ballots are taken to a central point and counted by appointed force, or else the count at the polls is supervised by appointed precinct officers.

*The Bureau of Municipal Research suggests elimi*nating from the Constitution the requirement of Article 8, Section 14, that a judge of elections and two inspectors shall be chosen in each election district annually by the citizens. We are impressed by the arguments offered in favor of some method of appointment of election officers as a substitute for popular election. The experience of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia is that popular election does not always assure trustworthy officials.

*The average citizen pays no attention to the candi*dates for judge and inspector of elections. After the election officers are elected many do not serve. We have the appointive method in the selection of registrars, and it has worked fairly well. The ballot would be shortened by the elimination of election officials, and that is desirable. Of course, in the event of the adoption of the appointive method, much depends on who is to do the appointing.

The proposed amendment to the Constitution is but one of many that are likely to be submitted to the Legislature. These amendments would have to be approved by the Legislature in both the 1935 and 1937 sessions, and could not be submitted to the people before 1938. The Constitution, adopted 60 years ago, is so badly in need of revision to make it conform to twentieth century conditions that it would be better to call a constitutional convention.

*The arguments in favor of a constitutional con*vention were ably presented in the report in yesterday's Sun-Telegraph of an address by Albert B. Maris, Philadelphia attorney. Mr. Maris urges changes in our system of local government to permit the elimination of excessive costs arising from duplication and waste. But, as he pointed out, we cannot make the necessary changes without re-writing the Constitution.

How absurd it is that the taxpayers of Forest County, with only 5,180 population, should be required to bear the expense of a county government! Provision should be made for the consolidation of small counties with their neighbors, and for the elimination of unnecessary officials. Second-class townships should be abolished, and the number of independent school districts greatly reduced. But these things cannot be done without extensive constitutional revision.

It is not only in the counties, townships, school, election and poor districts that desirable changes can be made. We believe the system under which the city of Pittsburgh is governed will bear investigation. We believe Pittsburgh has overlapping services and, perhaps, unnecessary offices or officials who could be dispensed with to the advantage of the taxpayers, both with respect to efficiency and economy.

Baltimore pulled itself out of a financial hole worse than that in which Pittsburgh at present finds itself by reorganizing the city departments on an efficiency basis. The groundwork for this achievement was laid, as the Western Pennsylvania Branch of the National Economy League points out in its current bulletin, by a commission of thirteen business executives who were appointed by the Mayor and who served without pay.

Pittsburgh should make a similar survey. Every branch of the municipal government should be subjected to careful scrutiny by an impartial committee of business and professional men with a view to effecting economies and increasing efficiency. Councilman William A. Magee has repeatedly advocated such a survey, and we hope that Council will take favorable action and that Mayor McNair will cordially co-operate.

The sub-zero weather makes timely a report issued by the Pittsburgh Motor Club on the cause of the difficulties of its members who send "can't get started" appeals for aid. The club says a large percentage of these calls are due to the failure of the motorists to change to lighter crankcase oils when cold weather comes. We pass this suggestion along for the benefit of our readers who couldn't start their cars today.

*The Bureau of Motor Vehicles at Harrisburg re*ports that 350,000 cars which were registered last year are still without 1934 license plates. Years ago it was the practice of many motorists to store their cars during the winter. But we believe most of those 350,000 car owners who have not yet obtained their 1934 licenses have not obtained them because it is not convenient at this time to pay the license fee.

*Christmas, at the end of the year, and the begin*ning of the new year bring many expenses. With depleted pocketbooks thousands of motorists cannot pay for new licenses until they have recovered from the year-end spending. To meet this situation numerous states have fixed the date for getting a new automobile license at some other time of the year. Pennsylvania might find it worth while to do likewise.

The Rising Tide

Over a tried and patient land
The flood of debt is sweeping,
Taxation growing out of hand
And Congress calmly sleeping—
Replying with a peaceful snore
To waters surging at the door.

The Income Tax will doom the wheels
Of industry to rust,
And all the flooded land appeals
For taxes fair and just.
And if we all must taxes pay,
The Sales Tax is the painless way.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Trenched deep in most of us are little tugs of inquisitiveness we rarely gratify. We wonder—and let it go! Perhaps a hundred times I've been puzzled to know why the usually haughty train conductor suddenly wilts, removes his hat and smirks apologetically through a dining car?

Or why every man in his youth longed to be the lamplighter in the Goody books? Or why so few opticians or their wives wear glasses? Or why no cartoonist ever thought of such an obvious and prolific source of revenue as Ripley's "Believe It or Not?" Or why writers cannot add?

Certain degage ladies, I think of Peggy Joyce as example, appear unalterably riveted to a giddyyap gospel of exuberance. They zoom into bright cafes exuviating all thought of tomorrow with their ermines. I never fail to wonder if they think: "Will they look at me thus 10 years hence?"

Then that insatiable curiosity over the other fellow's tip to a waiter. In my time, I've had sly squints at the pourboire of such notables as Vincent Astor, the Duke of Manchester, Cecil DeMille, J. P. Morgan and Theodore Dreiser. Incidentally Dreiser's was by far the biggest.

* * *

While this patter is trying gracefully to parabola into a question mark, there came to the door a man whose visiting card reads: "Wolfgang Horlick, Berlin." He has a worn volume of Rabelais in French to exchange for price of a ticket to Allentown, Pa. A trade was made, leaving me to speculate whatever will I do with a copy of Rabelais in French? And why does Wolfgang Horlich of Berlin want to go to Allentown?

* * *

Phyllis Haver Seaman, in outfitting secretly a Central Park west penthouse to surprise her husband, has one dazzlingly lit off-kitchen room that is a complete grocery, racked from floor to ceiling with brightly labeled cans of pears, peas, corn, etc., bottles of catsup, syrup, sauces and other tasty array of edibles. Her gesture was, of course, a compliment to her husband, a wholesale grocer. Yet, eyeing the geometrical sparkle, I wondered how many fraidy cats for other reasons had secretly installed such caches of groceries. You know—come the revolution!

Irvin Cobb is the best speller I know. He can handle microphyte, Pleiades and tamandua without a flicker. I wondered if he could write this down as I dictated: "It is disagreeable business to perceive the unparallelel embarrassment of an harassed peddler gauging the symmetry of a pealed pear stabbed by a sibyl with a poniard while listening to the innuendoes of a caterpillar gazing at lilies of a chameleon hue!"

He did not make a single fumble!

I wonder if there is a more expert phrase-maker than Christopher Morley? Every writer has his pondering moment when, with hand to brow, thoughts come to a full stop and he gazes into what Mark Twain called "innocuous desuetude" with the vanity of a dog scratching a behind-the-ear flea. Aptly, Morley calls it "mental hernia!"

The other evening at a supper I met three pleasant gentlemen, very rich and very young—Harvey Firestone, Jr., his brother Buddy, and Billy Leeds. In the swift succession of amazements we call recovery adjustments, I wondered just what would be the effect on their fortunes and future. How magically, too, in close contact such platinum figure: become merely run-of-the-mine fellows, saying the inane thing, using the wrong fork and gulping gobbets of flattery even as you and I.

Theater goers of yesterday remember dainty Lina Abarbanel floating from the wings like a puffball to sing "Every Little Movement, etc." in "Madam Sherry." This season in the theatrical down-beat she understudied many in "Champagne, Sec" whose talents never came within reaching distance of her own. We wondered, as nightly she toed the mark, awaiting a stumble, her reaction to the applause that might better have been hers.

Jim McIntyre and Tom Heath, in their 70's, are pairing up for a final minstrel round-up. The lay of the last minstrels! We wonder the out yonder sentiment for this grand and wholesome entertainment, featuring corked end men, satin coats and hats, Swanee River soft shoe dancers, bones, tambourines, a tremulous wonder if it has gone the way of puff sleeves, land booms and Peruvian bonds. That somehow would be a wrench.

LISTEN, WORLD!

The Truth About Motherhood

No term infuriates me more than that revered slogan—"AMERICAN MOTHERHOOD."

I am a mother. I am more grateful for that experience than for anything else in my life. I firmly believe that no profession can possibly give the average woman such pleasure, power and peace as motherhood—or such a proud position in her world, provided she makes good.

Yet I am convinced that most of the tributes paid to motherhood are pernicious bunk—and that motherhood, itself, is being increasingly used as a vicious racket.

Why this wild, indiscriminate praise for mothers, per se? It is no unique achievement to be a mother. It is a painful process, but rarely deserving of the wreaths it gets.

The simple fact is that few of us decide to be mothers. We do not walk, voluntarily, into the jaws of death. We are not heroic adventurers, self-sacrificing martyrs. We are human beings, warm with life, and motherhood is part of the process—frequently a most unwelcome part.

Moreover, to a real woman, motherhood is worth any price she may have to pay for it. Never yet did you hear a real mother whining about "all she had suffered," and expecting medals. It's only the quitters, parasites and racketeers who try to get extra dividends on something which should be its own reward.

Moreover, it does not follow that a mother is, necessarily, a prize exhibit—or even a desirable citizen. The birth ordeal does not automatically equip a woman with qualities to which she has hitherto been a stranger. It does not add one whit to her intelligence or spirituality.

A mother must achieve character by her own exertions, exactly as other human beings achieve it. It is not thrust upon her. And it is pop-eyed nonsense to assume that a woman is more tender, honest, brave, fair, generous, intelligent and reliable, merely because she is a mother.

Yet that is the general assumption—and no one is surer of it than Mamma, herself. As a spinster she may have been stupid, silly, selfish, lazy, bad-tempered and generally ornery. But once let her have a baby, and she considers herself endowed with superhuman wisdom and all the virtues.

This is particularly true in the United States. We American women possess amazing energy and ambition. We are all rarin' to go. But opportunity for adventure is still limited. So, while we're waiting for other worlds to conquer, we practice up on the Dear Ones at Home—and start our campaign by teaching little Jimmy and Jessie that Mamma-Can-Do-No-Wrong.

Which mightn't be so bad, if Mamma were willing to concede a few points to Dad. But nothing doing! She may be honestly devoted to Dad—a tender wife, a wise partner, a grand companion. But, when it comes to being a parent nothing can convince her that the Hand Which Rocks the Cradle doesn't have a million times tougher deal than the Fist Which Brings Home the Bacon. So while the Old Man, as a husband, may get a little credit, as a Father he doesn't even have a look-in.

No, it isn't funny. To the contrary, it's probably one of the major tragedies of history. For something has certainly happened to our American males—and it's my guess that it's their Mammas.

Be that as it may, the power of American Mothers is rapidly being turned into one of our worst rackets. Males must win their power by various achievements. A female need only become a mother. Forthwith, every clubwoman on earth is her belligerant backer.

As to what a Voting Mamma can do to Poor Papa in court—well, no insult intended, Judge, but you know how it is yourself!

All of which would seem to prove that we're sitting pretty, sisters. But don't be too sure! We mothers have had a lot of halos handed us in days gone by—and, taking us by and large, deserved most of them.

BUT WHEN WE START TURNING HALOS INTO BRASS KNUCKLES — THAT'S SOMETHING ELSE!

ISN'T IT SO?

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

One of the hardest things to bear anent companionship is that of doing something of which you are proud and finding your nearest and dearest does not want to be bothered to hear about it, at least "not now."

You are full of enthusiasm; how much good it would do you to have someone share this enthusiasm!

But how do you act when someone comes to you bubbling over, just aching to tell you something that interests them.

You keep one eye on your book and the other on your friend.

You may be getting half of it.

But you are not very satisfactory from a companionable standpoint.

But you say to yourself "such an inopportune time—why can't he wait?"

Now, if you think it over you will remember just who is likely to treat your thoughts with this careless interest.

You don't like it but you do the same to others.

Suppose you change your attitude toward those who would confide in you.

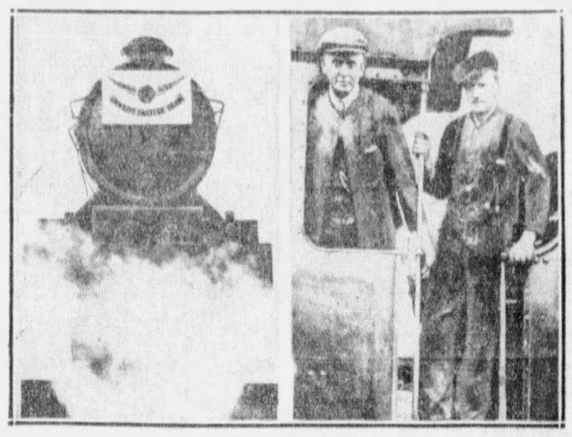
The Fastest Engine

And the Men That Drive It.



THIS LOCOMOTIVE AVERAGES SEVENTY-ONE AND A HALF MILES PER HOUR. THE ENGINEER, LEWIS, AND HIS FIREMAN, JARVIS, ARE SEEN ON THE RIGHT.

This is an age of speed, and in almost everything—racing dogs, horses, automobiles, airplanes, passenger trains—all depends on how fast you can go.

The speed of 71 miles an hour is made, of course, hauling a train much lighter than American trains. Our heavy Pullmans weigh 180,000 pounds—more than twice the weight of any English passenger coach.

The day is not far off when even 71 miles an hour will seem slow and be actually too slow for "useful transportation."

Especially made cars of light metal, driven with airplane propellers instead of the usual locomotive, have done 140 miles an hour. Diesel engines, hauling light cars, will soon carry passengers regularly at 120 miles per hour and faster.

Already the traveling time by airplane from Chicago to New York has been reduced to 4½ hours—about 200 miles per hour.

Passenger units made largely of aluminum, carrying thirty passengers in a car weighing 10,000 pounds or less, will transform our old-fashioned "fast rail travel." Then modern, heavy locomotives and cars will be a thing of the past.

Frank Buck, Noted Wild Animal Collector, Returns to America With Some Startling Stories

By Edwin C. Hill

MY friend, Frank Buck, who lassoes tigers, corrals wild elephants by the herd and slaps down king cobras—the most daring and successful of wild animal collectors—is back from a series of blazing adventures in the jungles of Nepal, the Malay States and Sumatra. Calling on this writer and offering a cigaret from a crested gold case presented to him by his friend the Sultan of Johore, Frank Buck, in his simple, modest style, told some tales of wild animal trapping that made the heart quicken in its beat.

Tall, rugged, face burned brown by 20 years of adventuring under tropical suns, scarred by the teeth and claws of the jungle cats and the big snakes he has garnered for zoos and circuses, Mr. Buck is a man to look at twice anywhere you meet him. The big prize he secured on his latest expedition is an Indian rhinoceros, a young male weighing two tons, and the most valuable wild beast in captivity, worth, probably $25,000 or $30,000. It goes to the St. Louis Zoo.

He brought back also 100,000 feet of film which he is cutting for a six or seven-reel motion picture, full of tiger killers and 25-foot pythons and black leopards, a picture which he is calling "Wild Cargo" after the title of his latest book.

One of his liveliest adventures was in trying to film a few hundred feet of a striped demon in Johore. He had trailed a big tiger to its jungle retreat and, failing to drive it into the open in daylight, kept on with the job after darkness fell. With a blazing torch in his hand he pushed into the thicket, poking the flares into the brush to the right and to the left. Suddenly there was an ear-shattering roar and a great crashing in the brush. The tiger was coming, flare or no flare, and coming like the raging demon he was.

Buck leaped backward. His heel caught in a creeping vine, which saved his life, for the great cat leaped high over him and the flaming torch. Buck could see his striped belly as he flashed over. Then the tiger was gone again, lost in the thicket.

Lucky Escape From Being Killed

"I WAS scared stiff," said Frank Buck, "and I didn't care who knew it. If ever a tiger had a chance to make a kill, this was the animal. In my helpless state on the ground he could have finished me in a flash. With one slash of his paw he could have ripped open my throat. The rest, the business of tearing me to pieces, would have been only a matter of seconds."

But he got to his feet, picked up his rifle and considered what to do next. Retreat was the only thing possible and with his Malay boy, Ali, he started to back away through the brush, holding the rifle ready. In fifty paces they were out of the heavy jungle, and as their fourth flare burned out Buck motioned to the boy not to light another. He felt himself practically out of danger. He relaxed his grip on the rifle and rested it in the crook of his arm.

Then in a flash, without a flicker of warning, in almost pitch dark, the tiger charged again, bursting through a gap in the thicket. He came like an exploding shell, more like something that had been hurled through the air than like an animal leaping from the ground.

Buck wheeled to meet the charge. He had no time to bring his rifle to his shoulder. He shot from the waist. He shot when the tiger was almost on top of him, when he could see its yellow eyes blazing like twin topazes in the darkness. He could even smell the rank scent of its breath. But he was too close for a miss. The 180 grain soft-nosed bullet tore its way through the left side of the tiger's breast, as he reared up, forelegs outstretched, claws spread, red mouth wide open, fangs gleaming. The terrific impact of the heavy bullet stopped him. He dropped with a shattered shoulder, threshing in the brush at Frank Buck's feet.

Frank jumped back a few feet and shot him dead, through the head. Then he took a tape measure and measured the distance from the imprint of his foot in the soft ground to the nearest front paw of the dead tiger. It was just 24 inches.

"And that," said Frank Buck, "was just about the closest call I ever had from presenting myself to St. Peter at the pearly gates."

Plea Is Made For the Indians

THE American Indian Defense Society wants the government to do something about the five civilized Indian tribes of Oklahoma—Creeks, Cherokees, Seminoles, Choctaws and Chickasaws. Hunger and stark need and utter neglect have reduced these wards of the government to destitution. Neglect and indifference are killing them off like a plague, according to the protest. Undernourished, living three or four families in a hut—forgotten men.

Uncle Sam has nothing whatever to be proud of in his treatment of the American Indian, for it has been one long record of broken treaties and land-grabbing.

Hitler Stopped By Christian Church

OVER in Germany Adolph Hitler has run his juggernaut over the Jews and the Communists. The headsman's axe falls with appalling regularity. The tramp of the brown-shirted Nazis across the face of Germany has been like the march of the Prussian Guards across the Belgian frontier. But just as Liege halted the goosestep of Von Moltke, today another fortress stands in the path of the flaming Nationalists of Herr Hitler. It is a barricade which has endured against the assaults of tyrants and oppressors for twenty centuries. It is the Christian Church.

The Protestants of Germany have declared against the Prussian Bishop, Muller, who wants the church nationalized and brought under the state. The Catholics continue their outspoken opposition to the program, and scarcely a day goes by that some courageous pastor or priest is not dragged from the pulpit and jailed for preaching against Hitlerism.

In this conflict events are moving rapidly. Unless the adroit Chancellor can sidestep, or create some international diversion, the head-on crash will come soon. The Hitlers, the Goebels and the Goehrings may find that they are up against something more rugged than a feeble, fearful minority.

If it does come, look to Munich and that stern, gaunt, aristocrat, Michael, Cardinal von Faulhaber, Archbishop of the Bavarian capital. He is the ranking Roman Catholic prelate of the land. It is he who has just reminded the Nazis that their remote ancestors, of they whom they would make gods, were slothful, ignorant savages, and that in the Kingdom of God there are neither favorites nor stepchildren.
